"Toodles" in Court

RUSSIANS NEAR CRACOW

"TOODLES" CASE IS HELD UP

WAKEFIELD DEATH TRIAL BEGUN

JUROR ILL AND 'TOODLES' TRIAL IS PUT OVER

The trial of Miss Elizabeth M. Ryan's $50,000 breach of promise suit against Harry K. Mansfield, owner of the Ferncroft Inn, was today postponed until Thursday because of the illness of one of the jurors.

The juror reported sick is Peter J. Freely, of No. 916 Albany street, Roxbury.

After a conference with counsel, Judge Fessenden made this announcement:

"Because of the slight illness of Juror Freely, the case is postponed until Thursday at 10 a. m."

There was no testimony in the trial today. At 10 o'clock, when court opened, eleven jurors filed into their seats, remained about five minutes and then left the courtroom. Meanwhile Attorneys Coakley and Daley, counsel for Miss Ryan, and Attorneys Sullivan and Ronan, counsel for Mansfield, talked with Judge Fessenden in the judge's lobby. Shortly afterwards the eleven jurors were excused and the postponement was announced.

The courtroom was filled with spectators, among whom were several women.

Since the trial started, four weeks ago, the corridor adjoining the courtroom has been crowded two hours before court convened, and there was no exception today.

The cause of the gathering today was due, it is claimed, to a remark made at the trial last Friday by At-

Cruiser Montana Ordered to Haiti

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—The armored cruiser Montana, commanded by Captain Louis M. Nulton and carrying 600 marines, was ordered today to go from Guantanamo to Port au Prince, Haiti, to aid other vessels there in protecting American interests.

Secretary Daniels said that reports from naval officers in Haitien ports showed continued activity of the revolutionists which has caused alarm among foreign residents.

Shipping Raid Depresses Cotton

NEW YORK, Feb. 1.—The fact that Germany has started a campaign against British shipping, caused an unfavorable effect on sentiment in the cotton exchange today. The market failed to respond to the strength shown by Liverpool and trading was quiet.

JURY CHOSEN FOR ALBERTSON DEATH TRIAL

To jury for the trial of Biagio Faizone, Ignazio Morelli ed Luigi Graziadonio in connection with the murder of Maurice A. Albertson, a Lawrence jeweler, was completed in the Superior Court at Cambridge shortly after the trial opened before Judge Irwin today.

The jurors in the order they were chosen are as follows:

John McGovern, inspector, Framingham.
Edgar C. Mead, farmer, Roxborough.
Michael J. Keegan, motorman, Lowell.
William J. Bowditch, watchmaker, Waltham.
John H. Coffey, farmer, Roxborough.
Charles W. Berry, salesman, Malden.
Charles King, hardware, Newton.
Isaac H. Locke, student, Belmont.
William G. Kelly, clerk, Woburn.
George A. Graham, watchman, Framingham.
Merton L. Fisk, farmer, Billerica.
Fred L. Morey, salesman, Everett.
Morey, the last juror chosen, was the fifty-seventh venireman called out of the total of 364 available.

It was announced that the jury will be locked up, during the trial, in the old bankruptcy courtroom. This afternoon the jury went to Wakefield to view the shack in the rear of No. 34 Columbia road, where Albertson's body was found buried in a deep grave.

Of the three prisoners on trial Faizone is named as principal, Morelli as an accomplice, and Graziadonio as an accessory before the fact.

J. W. Connolly represented Faizone, Joseph Zottoli appeared for Graziadonio and Thomas J. Grady for Morelli. District Attorney William J. Corcoran, with Frank P. O'Donnell and William T. McCarthy as his assistants, conducted the case for the government.

About fifty witnesses have been summoned by each side.

Women Voters Must Tell Ages

CHICAGO, Feb. 1.—Women voters of Chicago must tell their ages when they register tomorrow, according to a ruling today by County Judge Thomas F. Scully. They must answer the same questions, he ruled, that are required of the men.

Leo Frank Hearing Is Set for Feb. 23

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—The Supreme Court today entered an order advancing the case of Leo M. Frank of Atlanta, Ga., convicted murderer of Mary Phagan, an Atlanta factory girl, setting February 23 for final argument.

'Anybody Here Kissed Toodles?' Is the Newest Boston Song

"Toodles" is at last to be immortalized in song. "Has Anybody Here Kissed Toodles?" is the title of a new song that will be sung tonight for the first time on any boston stage, in John Cort's new musical farce, "What's Going On?" which opens tonight at the Cort Theatre. The words and music were written by D. J. Sullivan, a prominent Boston song and lyric writer, who wrote "You're as Welcome as the Flowers in May," and several of the songs that helped to make Chauncey Olcott famous.

Toodles is a sweet girl,
Toodles is a pet;
Toodles is a charmer,
You can bet.
Many boys in our town
Really couldn't miss
When they had a chance to
Steal a kiss.
Lips just like a cherry,
Cheeks that beat the rose,
She is to the merry
Everybody knows.

Lovers came from Ireland,
Lovers came from Spain,
One that wasn't crazy
Went insane.
Some of them were single,
Some of them were not,
They were such a naughty,
Naughty lot.
All the world is craving
For a Toodles kiss.
Don't you think I'm raving
When I ask you this—

CHORUS.

Has anybody here kissed Toodles?
Fair Toodles, I—oodles.
Some millionaires with great big boodles
Just spend their coin to see her smile so prettily.
All the boys have lost their noodles,
Their poor, twisted noodles.
You don't know what you miss—
I am simply asking this—
Has anybody here kissed Toodles?

WHITE HOUSE PLAN TO END FILIBUSTER

WASHINGTON, Feb. —In an effort to smash the Republican filibuster the bite House will make it clear in the next few days that the administration does not contemplate the purchase of belligerent ships of any kind under the shipping bill. Only neutral ships, it is understood, are to be bought by the government and there is no danger of complications with the European belligerents.

Republicans in the filibuster have declared that three are no neutral ships to be purchased and that only interned belligerent vessels are available.

This statement is disputed by administration officials and a statement is expected to be made before long showing that the ship purchase plan never has contemplated the buying of belligerent ships.

A score of Senators appeared when the Senate met and the usual call of the roll to obtain a quorum was begun.

Senator Fletcher of Florida, in charge of the bill entered the Democratic cloak room with a bulging portfolio.

"I brought my camping outfit in time," he said, "and the other Democratic Senators have been warned to bring theirs. We are going to stay here until we pass this bill. That means running all night and all day without any stop until we are through."

MAY FORFEIT COL. ALEXANDER'S BAIL

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Feb. 1.—Witness Colonel Charles Alexander, indicted in Chicago under the Sherman act, appears there today, his bail will be forfeited, it was learned here today. This word came to local federal officials.

Colonel Alexander's failure to appear in Chicago last week resulted in the postponement of the trial of Miss Bessie Cupe, the girl named in the charges against him. She is charged with attempting bribery in offering to share with federal officials any amount up to $50,000 that could be secured from Colonel Alexander by threats.

Colonel Alexander did not appear and inquiries here developed the fact that he was not in Providence. He was, however, expected to return yesterday, but, according to members of his family, he did not do so.

Henry W. Hayes, his attorney, did return yesterday, and said today that he had been in Chicago and in Washington—where it is believed he sought to induce the high officials of the Department of Justice to aid in the Alexander case on the ground that the [illegible] was being persecuted.

Colonel Alexander's bondsman is Robert G. Foster. He said today: "I haven't heard from Colonel Alexander for three weeks, and I am not a bit concerned about it."

SUBMARINE RAID STRIKES TERROR TO THE BRITISH

LONDON, Feb. 1.—The sinking of four British steamships and the partial wrecking of a fifth liner within the past forty-eight hours, the first great havoc wrought in Germany's new submarine war on England's merchant marine, brought consternation to London shipping circles today, and spread a profound fear that Great Britain's food supplies from abroad might be largely cut off.

Naval experts here today admitted that the Kaiser's submarines might be able to paralyze completely British shipping despite the warships guarding the coast.

Meanwhile marine insurance rates went soaring, jumping 50 per cent. Prices are expected to go even higher as a result of the new peril to all British shipping.

TO "STARVE OUT ENGLAND"

It is the conviction here that the successful assaults on British merchantile ships so far are in pursuance of the Kaiser's naval policy by which it is the German Emperor's hope to execute Admiral von Tirpitz's threat to "starve out England."

Greece Now Ready to Fight for Servia

PARIS, Feb. 1.—A dispatch to the Havas agency from Athens says: "Greece with all her forces will come to the aid of Servia in case of [illegible] invasion of Servia by the Austro-Hungarian armies. The greatest activity prevails now in military quarters."

AUSTRIANS ARE OVERWHELMED NEAR TARNOW

LONDON, Feb. 1.—According to a dispatch to the newspaper Tribune de Geneve, the Austrians have suffered an overwhelming defeat at the hands of the Russians near Tarnow, 12,000 Austrians being killed, wounded or captured. The Austrians are reported to be in full retreat, leaving guns and ammunition behind.

Tarnow is in Galicia, about fifty miles east of Cracow. Desperate fighting has been in progress since the Russian army menacing Cracow was forced back by the Germans about a month ago.

RUPEL GERMAN ASSAULT.

Four German regiments took part in the assault upon the Russian lines near Borjimow on Saturday, all of which lost heavily, it was officially announced at Petrograd today. The Russians captured three officers and more than sixty men. The following communication was given out by the Russian War Office:

"The Russians continue to advance in the forests north of Gumbinnen and Pilkallen in East Prussia, where stubborn fighting is still in progress. There was a bayonet fight on Saturday in the region of Borjimow, where the Germans occupied Russian trenches which we have now reoccupied ourselves. We captured three officers and more than sixty men as well as a maximum gun. On the same day the enemy attempted to repel an attack by Russian outposts on their trenches, but was repulsed. Only a small part of the enemy's forces succeeded in retaining their position.

GREAT BATTLES RAGING IN EASTERN THEATRES OF WAR

TAKE MANY PRISONERS.

"Prisoners state that in the German attack upon the Russian position near Borjimow four German infantry regiments suffered heavily. Russian artillery has been most successful on the whole front. Left of the Vistula our guns seriously damaged the enemy's positions, causing serious loss. In the Carpathians the Russian situation is satisfactory. On the front from Dukla Pass to Wyszkow we are advancing."

The statement says that the Russians have taken many prisoners, the exact number of which has not yet been ascertained.

The Russian forces invading Hungary through Dukla Pass have been heavily reinforced. It is reported unofficially at Petrograd that the Austro-German forces, massed in the Eastern Carpathians, have been outflanked and that the Russian army which crossed the Dukla Pass is moving forward swiftly without serious opposition."

It is officially announced at Vienna that the battle for possession of the northern passes in the Carpathians continues without decisive results. The Austrian forces in the Carpathians have been strongly reinforced by part of Field Marshal Von Hindenburg's German army. Artillery duels are reported from Galicia and skirmishes from Bukowina.

Unofficial dispatches printed in Rome and Paris state that the Russians are in complete possession of Dukla pass, having outflanked the Teutonic allies at that point, and are pressing forward toward interior Hungary.

DESTROY GERMAN TRENCHES.

Destruction of German trenches which were in the course of construction along the Aisne River, by French artillery, is reported in an official statement issued by the French War Office at Paris this afternoon. It is stated that the Germans have lost heavily in the hard fighting which has been in progress in the Argonne. Artillery duels are reported from a number of districts, particularly West Flanders.

The French official communique follows in full:

"The day of January 31, like the preceding one, was marked by artillery combats, which were particularly intense in all the regions of the north.

"To the southeast of Ypres the Germans attempted an attack on our trenches to the north of the canal. This attack was immediately stopped by the combined fire of our artillery and our infantry.

"All along the front of the River Aisne, from the junction of this river with the Oise and as far as Bierry-au-Bac, our batteries succeeded in a certain number of engagements in demolishing some German trenches which were being built as shelters for mitrailleuses, and silenced in several instances the mine throwers and the artillery of the enemy.

"In Champagne, to the northwest of Mesnil-les-Hurlus, we have consolidated our position around a small forest of which we became masters the day before yesterday.

"In the Argonne the day has been one of relative calm, the Germans apparently having lost heavily in the recent fight.

"On the front at Woevre, Lorraine and in Vosges there is nothing important to report."

RUSSIANS REPULSED BACK.

The German War Office announced this afternoon that there had been no developments in western theatre of war during the past twenty-four hours. The following statement, however, was issued late Sunday at Berlin:

"The passes through the wooded mountain district of the Carpathian ranges have been the scene of the most violent fighting. For some operations in Russian Poland and Western Galicia, they formed a strong attraction to Russians because their possession would keep the way open for an invasion of Hungary.

"After four days of heroic fighting, our troops succeeded in throwing back the Russians from Uzok pass although subsequently our troops had to give up the advanced line they were holding along a ridge and retreat to another position, which was taken up on another ridge in the rear. This movement resulted from the fact that the Russians had superior numbers.

"The Russians again attempted to break through our lines, but their attacks were repulsed. The enemy delivered attacks on our positions near Reybely, south of Ychragail, Yelevo and near Ockermecz."

GAIN SOUTH OF VISTULA.

The following official statement was given out this afternoon at Berlin relative to operations in the East:

"There is nothing important to report from East Prussia. Southwest of Mlawa and north of the Vistula River the Russians have been driven out of some places which they had occupied on Sunday. South of the Vistula the Germans have gained further ground. German attacks have been renewed south of the Pilica River."

The following dispatch from St. Omer tells of the fighting at La Bassee, in which Princess Patricia's light infantry of Canada figured:

GERMAN STUCK IN MUD.

"German landsturm regiments attempted to take the trenches of the Canadian troops by storm, but the Canadians were ready for them. The German charge suddenly came to a halt in front of the trenches and the Canadians leaped over the parapet and began a counter charge. Then they found that the German soldiers had become mired in the deep, sticky mud and were crawling painfully back toward their own lines. Four Canadians were killed, but the German loss was much heavier.

"The next day Lieutenant Prince of the Canadians was killed while leading a relief company to the trenches. Another officer named Pearson is reported to have been killed in the same way by a German sniper. The Canadian troops were bombarded by a German aeroplane at breakfast, but, despite their newness to the game, they behaved like veterans."

GERMANS TO INVADE SERVIA.

Sofia dispatches say that heavy firing was heard all day Sunday in the Danube valley, east of the Iron Gate, indicating a renewal of hostilities in Eastern Servia. It is believed that the Austrians, reinforced by German troops, are preparing to begin a new invasion of Servia.

Official announcement was made at Petrograd today of the occupation of Tabriz, Persia, by Russian troops. The following details were given:

"After the battle at Sofia, the Turks, who had suffered heavily, retired toward Tabriz, which the Russians occupied about midday on Saturday. The Turks and the Kurd allies fled in the direction of Maragan. The Russian consul-general at Tabriz, who fled from that city when the Turks entered it, is returning. Among the spoils seized by the Russians in Sofia was a holy war flag."

TURKS SEIZE TREASURE.

It is reported from Ishapan that the Turkish army of invasion in Persia looted the sanctuaries at Kerbela, seizing $10,000,000 worth of treasure.

Two thousand Turkish troops have crossed Persian territory on route to Asuats, where rich British oil fields are located.

Believe War Will Last Six Months

AMSTERDAM, Feb. 1.—Dutch papers, commenting upon the report that Baron Von Burian, the Austrian Foreign Minister, went to Berlin to urge Germany to seek peace, express the belief that the Kaiser will fight to the last. It is taken as a foregone conclusion that the war will last at least six months longer. Germany's reply to Austria's request for peace was to offer 1,000,000 more troops to help the Austrians defeat the Russians and Servians.

THREAT BY GERMAN SEA LORD TO STARVE GREAT BRITAIN

The following warning of Germany's intention to try to starve out Great Britain by submarine warfare against her commerce was given to an AMERICAN correspondent in Berlin December 22 last by Grand Admiral von Tirpitz, head of Germany's sea forces:

ADMIRAL VON TIRPITZ.

"America has not raised her voice in protest and has taken little or no action against England's closing of the North Sea to neutral shipping. What will America say if Germany declares submarine war on all the enemy's merchant ships? Why not? England wants to starve us. We can play the same game. We can bottle her up and torpedo every English or allies' ship which nears any harbor in Great Britain, thereby cutting off large food supplies."

Germany, says the admiral, is prepared to fight to the very hilt, and her resources, he asserts, are fully equal to England's.

Asked as to a possible invasion of England by Zeppelins, he said:

"I believe that submarine warfare against the enemy's merchant ships would be more effective.

"We have always figured that submarines could not stay out more than three days on account of the men becoming exhausted.

"We now learn that the bigger types have cruised clear around England and often remained out for fourteen days. This is accomplished by going down in shallow and quiet water, settling on the bottom, and staying there while the men get their required sleep."

Kaiser Satisfied with War Progress

BERLIN, Feb. 1. (By wireless)—It was announced today by the government news bureau that Emperor William held a long conference yesterday with General von Falkenhayn, German chief of staff, during which the situation in both theatres of war was thoroughly discussed. Afterward the Kaiser expressed satisfaction with the progress made in France and Poland.

GERMAN RAIDS ALARM ENGLAND

Von Tirpitz boasted that England could be effectually bottled up by the torpedoing of its merchant ships by submarines. A similar idea was worked out by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle in a short fiction story he wrote before the outbreak of the war. Its title was "Danger," and the famous author showed how submarine attacks on British ships soon sent the price of foodstuffs to prohibitive figures and brought "England to her knees within a short time."

The question of the hour throughout Great Britain is: "Will it come to pass as the creator of Sherlock Holmes predicted?"

"Henceforth British merchant shipping will have to reckon with German submarines," writes Captain Persius, naval expert of the Berliner Tageblatt, commenting today on the beginning of Germany's submarine campaign which has for its object the starvation of England.

The Berlin Tageszeitung says: "We hope that the new commercial war taken up by German submarines in British home waters will go to the very root of British interoceanic trade."

FEAR FOR BIG LINERS.

Fears were expressed today for the safety of a number of big steamships, including the Lusitania, on her way from New York to Liverpool. It was announced that the Admiralty would probably detail war craft to escort the big incoming liners into port.

Three of the four liners were sunk in the Irish Sea by the German submarine U-21, which is now called the "under water Emden." The other two were attacked in the English Channel, the Tokomaru being torpedoed and sunk and the liner Karia being so badly damaged by a torpedo that she was in a sinking condition today when she arrived at Havre, France.

The first British merchant ship to be torpedoed by a German submarine was the Durward, which was sunk on January 21 by the "unterseeboote" A-19.

The steamers sent to the bottom in the Irish Sea were the Ben Cruachen, Linda Blanche and Kilcoan.

TO EXTEND NAVAL PATROL.

Following a conference at the Admiralty today it was learned that the naval patrol all around England, Scotland and Ireland will be extended.

It is believed that England will lodge vigorous protest with the United States government against Germany's attacks upon harmless merchant ships.

The Tokomaru and the Ikaria were torpedoed off the French coast within a short distance from warships which were patrolling the channel.

Members of the crew of the Tokomaru, who arrived here today, said that the ship was stationary, waiting for her pilot, when an explosion occurred. The vessel was about twenty miles off Havre. The crew immediately disembarked as the ship began to sink rapidly. No submarines were seen and no warning was given, but it is taken for granted that the ship was torpedoed by a German underwater craft.

NO WARNING GIVEN.

That the Tokomaru was torpedoed by a German submarine without any previous warning being given was the declaration made here today by members of her crew.

First Results of Germany's Raid on Food of England

Here are the first results of Germany's attack on England's food supplies. The attack was foreshadowed in an utterance by Grand Admiral von Tirpitz, head of the German navy, on December 22:

January 22—British steamer Dent sunk in North Sea.
January 22—Trawler Dortourios sunk in North Sea.
January 22—Steamer Durward torpedoed and sunk in North Sea.
January 30—Steamer Ben Cruachen sunk in Irish Sea.
January 30—Steamer Linda Blanche sunk in Irish Sea.
January 30—Steamer Ben Cruachen Irish Sea.
January 31—Steamer Tokomaru torpedoed in English Channel.
January 31—Steamer Ikaria sunk in English Channel.

GERMAN HERE AFTER ESCAPING BRITISH PRISON

Lieut. Frank Shmidt of the German army reserve is free in Boston after escaping from the citadel, a British military prison at Halifax, N. S. He is seeking means of transportation to the Fatherland to join the colors.

Shmidt escaped with eight comrades on January 28, after the forty or more Germans in the prison had celebrated the Kaiser's birthday. Arriving in Boston last night, he visited the German consul today. He also sent the news of his escape to his wife and two children, who are in Vera Cruz.

Lieut. Shmidt told the story of his remarkable adventure to a Boston AMERICAN reporter in a hotel today.

"For ten years," he said, "I was an inspecting engineer in the employ of the National Mexican railway. Soon after the war started I sailed from Vera Cruz on the steamship Montserrat, bound for Barcelona, leaving my wife and children behind. There were thirty-nine other Germans aboard. We wanted to get home to fight for the Fatherland. I am a Prussian and my home is in Berlin.

CAPTURED AT SEA.

"On September 8, when our ship was 200 miles east of New York, we were stopped by the British cruiser Gloria. The boarding party hauled down the Spanish flag and ran up the British ensign. We were taken to Halifax and all the Germans marched to the citadel.

"The British had no right to seize us on the high seas while on a Spanish vessel. They treated us badly. We had poor food. It was tea and stale bread for breakfast, minced ham and sour potatoes at noon and tea and bread for supper. We were allowed to exercise in a very small yard.

"Beyond the cell building in which we were confined was a high wall on which a sentry always walked. We needed a rope to escape and made one by weaving together pieces of twine. We also made a saw out of a steel table knife and cut through the cell bars. It took a long time and we had to work in secret. We took a hook off the wall and tied it to the rope and so we could hoist our frail ladder to the top of the wall.

TEN IN THE PLOT.

"There were ten in the plot to escape. We crouched under the wall in darkness until the sentry's back was turned. Then we threw the rope over the top of the wall and the hook caught. We were then able to climb over.

Out of ten men who tried to get over the wall only one was caught. We separated and made our way to Halifax. A vigilant search was made for us and four of my comrades were caught in the city. I do not know what became of the others.

"When we were captured at sea all our money was taken, but the British allowed us to keep our jewelry. I had a diamond ring. It was a heirloom and precious, but I had to part with it to get to this country.

Doctor Prescribes Tango But Mrs. Castle Collapses

Mrs. Vernon Castle, famous tangoist, who is a victim of nervousness, and now in hospital, through Dr. Hutchinson's claims this form of dancing is good for the health.

NEW YORK, Feb. 1.—"Tangoes, turkey trots, one-steps and other modern forms of dancing are a boon to humanity. Instead of being the cause of insanity and immorality they are an incentive to sound thinking and clean living. They are essentially athletic, and therefore promote health of mind and body."

This sweeping indorsement of the dance craze was made by Dr. Woods Hutchinson, the noted physician and author.

"It is not true, as Dr. Manton Carrick is declared to have asserted," continued Dr. Hutchinson, "that one-eighth of the insane people of this country have been made so by tangoes. Personally I am convinced that the dance craze is responsible for a most rational method of life. The modern dances afford such scope for general exercise that it is impossible for anybody to deny that in this sense alone they are beneficial. They are one of the greatest cures for obesity.

"Stout folks are always targets for jest and jibe when they appear on the floor, but all devotees of the tango take such precautions with their diet that it is an aesthetic delight to look at a room filled with slender, swaying men and women moving to the rhythm of lilting music.

"This precaution extends to the older folk, who are just as enthusiastic over the tango as the younger generation. A sure sign of a dull and uninteresting old age is the accumulation of fat. As a result of the desire to be thin and graceful enough to dance, overfeeding and overdrinking have been reduced to a minimum. Both these habits are the cause of almost innumerable diseases.

"If 'bunny hugs' have accomplished nothing other than to improve the standard of health their inclusion in social functions has not been in vain. But they have done much more; they have likewise improved the morals of the present generation.

"This may seem to be a strange statement in view of the many assertions to the contrary, but I shall prove my contention. Tango parties to cafes where public dancing is the vogue almost always include the parents and other relatives of the young folk. The simple presence of the senior acts as a balance wheel on any frivolous proclivities. For no other reason than that of pride many ardent dancers have absolutely given up the use of alcoholic beverages so that their minds may be clear and the more readily attuned to the invention of new steps.

"It has been stated that many inmates of sanitariums trace their nervous breakdowns to a too real ous devotion to the dance. That proves nothing. All crazes, such as bridge, and others, that have from time to time swept the country, reap a harvest of victims.

$1.54 WHEAT SETS NEW HIGH RECORD

Wheat sold today at $1.54 a bushel, the high record for the present movement. Flour is selling at $8 or more a barrel at wholesale, compared with $4.80 a few months ago. In fact, the present situation in the flour and baking trades has had no parallel since the Civil War.

One of the most momentous questions with almost everybody is whether there will be an advance in the price of bread per loaf. Big Boston bakers disclaim any intention of raising the price at once, but will not say that the size of loaves will not be reduced, if wheat continues to soar in price.

Last year this country raised the greatest wheat crop on record, and with the several more plentiful than ever the ordinary logic of events would indicate cheap bread. But the European war has upset any such calculation. Fighting will prevent sowing and reaping and the greater part of Europe will have to be supplied in 1915 from the last year crop in this country.

GRAIN ELEVATORS LOADED.

E. F. Cutting of the Federal Milling Company, with offices in the Chamber of Commerce building, states that the General Baking Company, of which the Ward Company is a unit, watches his German antagonist across the Atlantic. As to raising the price of bread he says:

"One of them is afraid and the other dare not."

Cutting, who has followed the flour market in New England since 1880, declares that if flour goes much higher Boston must pay a cent more for bread or be content with smaller loaves. Many of the small bakers are running at a loss and larger concerns are making nothing.

No one will venture to state that wheat is going to $2, but are ready to say that such is not an impossibility if the foreign buyers continue to place orders as they are doing now.

It is said that grain elevators in Boston are bursting with wheat waiting for ships to transport it across the Atlantic.

Early buying on the part of large wholesale bakers has saved Boston and New England from immediate danger of higher priced bread, but no one is willing to say how long the present five-cent loaves will continue to be the standard.

HATHAWAY'S STATEMENT.

Alton H. Hathaway, whose bakery in Cambridge turns out thousands of loaves a day, says:

"It is self-evident that at the present flour prices the bakers cannot put out the same weight of bread and make a living profit.

"As a firm we take the view that uniformity of quality and weight in a loaf is a fundamental thing desired by the consuming public.

"It has been our policy for many years to put out the best possible value in our bread which would enable us to make a fair profit on an average market, and when flour prices have gone very high we have maintained this value with perhaps a slight reduction of weight, even if this means a temporary loss of profit.

"We follow this policy, trusting that lower prices will follow a high market and allow us to make ourselves whole again.

"We have had no parallel conditions to those at present since the Civil War. If this condition should last indefinitely we should be compelled to cut our cloth somewhere, but we own considerable flour of the best grade, bought at prices much lower than the present market price.

"We believe that in view of the fact that bread is one of the staple necessities we owe it to our public to put out the best product as low as we can, and shall make no immediate advance in price nor cut in weight."

CURLEY URGES TRAFFIC UNION

Mayor Curley recommended a great union freight and passenger system and the abolition of the Union Freight Railroad that costs Boston shippers $500,000 in transfer charges alone every year, in his inaugural message at the first meeting of the new City Council today.

Personal pledges that he will have erected a new school administration building in the immediate future, give youth beaten a two-mile bathing beach of white sand, favor a new botanical building, as well as a big rose and rhododendron garden in the Fenway, also featured his message.

The Mayor further urged the City Council to help him lay new sanitary and noiseless pavements throughout the city, to secure a better connecting link with Quincy, and to instigate a tree-planting campaign that shall result in a more beautiful city.

Henry E. Hagan, the only new member of the council, with Councillors John A. Coulthurst and Walter Ballantyne, the two re-elected members, and the six hold-over members, applauded these constructive suggestions.

BIG FINANCIAL SAVINGS.

Reviewing the administration accomplishments during the past year the Mayor asserted that:

$1,146,000 had been saved the city in the new ten-year lighting contracts.

$1,100,000 had been paid out in laying out private-way streets as public highways.

$1,250,000 had been expended on trunk and open-trench sewer work alone.

More than a $1,000,000 had been paid for City Hospital improvements during the year.

Provision had been made for the best convalescent hospital in the country at the old Parental School grounds.

Building operations had increased $25,000,000 during the year, throughout the city as a whole.

LOWER DEATH RATE.

The death rate in Boston was the lowest in its history and the fire losses far lower than last year.

Twice as much was paid to needy mothers under the widows' pension act and no poor woman was denied assistance.

Sprinkler systems and fire escapes had been put on all public lodging houses and all private hospitals.

More than 500 dilapidated buildings had been demolished after being condemned as fire traps during the year.

That this record of accomplishments was due in large part to the co-operation of the City Council, the Mayor asserted, was unquestionable. He also pleaded for a continuance of the same friendly spirit this year.

Shakespeare Most Read Library Book

The sixty-third annual report of the trustees of the public library lists that the books most frequently consulted are Shakespeare, Browning, Dumas, arithmetic, Polish and Russian literature. On March 31 the library will celebrate its twentieth birthday in the present building. In 1831, the library consisted of 67,740 volumes in the central library and 152,635 in the branches. The total now is 823,342 in the central library and 270,369 in the branches.

BIG CROWD AT 'TOODLES' TRIAL

terney Daniel H. Coakley, counsel for Miss Ryan, who said to Attorney Michael L. Sullivan of Salem, representing Mansfield:

"You wait till next week."

The argument between the attorneys which led up to the remark was the interruption of Attorney Sullivan, who said to Attorney Coakley:

"Oh, that silly twiddle twaddle—that bluff doesn't go."

When Attorney Coakley made the "you wait till next week" remark Attorney Sullivan added: "I'll be here."

WOMEN MAY TESTIFY.

Charles M. Brooks, colored, of New York and New Jersey, who testified on Friday that he boxed with Jack Johnson, was scheduled to resume his testimony today. He is a witness for the defense. He testified he knew Miss Ryan, met her at a poolroom party in New York, saw her showing affection for a man other than Mansfield, and related the story of a meeting him in New York and hearing in his cab ride that he became he was to testify at the trial.

Today marked the fifth week of the trial, which is expected to last several days longer. While the list is a number of new witnesses on both sides who are expected to testify. Several of these new witnesses, it is said, are women.

Former Alderman Patrick Bowen of Boston, whose name figured in the testimony of James Mullen, a witness for the defence, who caused a sensation by mentioning the names of prominent citizens he saw liberal Miss Ryan at the Fenerolf Inn, is expected to testify.

Timothy Mahoney of Peabody, chauffeur for Mansfield at the time Miss Ryan lived at the Raleigh street house, and at the time, will follow witness Brooks on the stand today. Mahoney is a witness for the defense. He was summoned by Attorney Sullivan and answered several questions put to him with "I don't remember," "I don't recall." He did not appear the following day, and word reached Attorney Sullivan that he was ill at his home in Peabody and under the care of a physician.

TO CALL CHAUFFEUR.

When Mahoney appeared several days later his memory of happenings was not much better than when first testified. Attorney Sullivan did not press him for answers to his questions any further that day. He said he would call him again before the trial ended.

Another witness slated to be heard is a young man who acted as chauffeur to Mansfield on different occasions. He will testify for the defence.

PEDIGREED CUPID TO GIVE SUPERMAN

Segregation of drunkards and victims of tuberculosis or other incurable diseases, restriction of immigration, the establishment of a system of registration of individual pedigrees by which a would-be-wife or husband's present physical condition and past history may be ascertained before issuing a permit to marry, are among the reforms suggested by Dr. William P. Graves, heredity expert at Harvard Medical School, in order to realize anything approaching the superman.

Dr. Graves made the statements in a lecture on "Heredity," at the Medical School.

Dr. Graves thought the pedigree plan ought to be workable as regards "the better classes," and enable a father to quickly ascertain whether the suitor's pedigree would make him a desirable son-in-law.

Miss Foley Blames Low Wages for Single Women

Why Are You Unwed? Where Is 'Right Man' for You?

Letters Tell of Ban on Proposals by Women Balking Cupid.

Attention, all ye unmarried young women!

Stop—look—read!

WHY are you single? Why?

Think not that query impertinent. Ignore it not in scorn. His only asked that you may be aided. Why, then, are you single? Why have you failed to find a husband? Is it because you have not as yet met the "right man," or, providing that you have met the gentleman in question, is it because the latter has lacked the nerve to do the rest? Is it because—but, what is the reason? Tell it, girls, and take a load off your minds.

The question here asked was first propounded by a woman herself. This woman asks the question—and naturally others of a kindred nature—in an article appearing in the current issue of Good Housekeeping. By the woman it is asked in a casual, womanly way. By the AMERICAN, however, it is deemed a question of vital importance—one meriting thorough consideration. Ergo, the AMERICAN is asking the question of every unmarried woman in New England—asking it that the truth of a most important matter—one involving the present and future happiness of thousands of souls—may forever be established.

UNWED AND THIRTY.

This woman whose name is concealed because of the naked frankness with which she writes, but the mere mention of whose name would be a guarantee of her sincerity, is unmarried at thirty—or so herself. Moreover, she is credited with being a woman of rare personal charm and one possessed of worldly means. And yet, as above recorded, she still lives on in single blessedness(?), a victim of those circumstances she is now asking to deplore.

The article is entitled: "What Can the Matter Be?" The author is styled "A Well-Known Woman." The subject matter is at once the frank confession of an unfilled heart and the bitter denunciation of a social code to which the writer attributes the unwedded, unhappy state of all her ilk.

Under the general question which heads the article the writer asks six others. They are:

Why are there so many perfectly good unmarried women?

Don't they want to be married?

Don't they meet the right man?

Why don't they?

How can they?

Why is modern society so formed that the great mistake of the right people never meeting exists?

Girls—readers—the AMERICAN is deeply interested in the subject at issue. It invites your confidence. It asks you to write and tell your troubles. This invitation is general. If you have a grievance, send it along. If you have a remedy, send that along as well. But, anyway, write the AMERICAN and, as the fellow says: "Do It Now."

Your letters need not be signed, but they must be serious in text.

MISS FOLEY'S VIEW.

In order to start the ball rolling, the AMERICAN today prints some of the letters already received and likewise an interview on the subject with Miss Margaret Foley, the noted suffragist. While Miss Foley has often been reported as engaged, and though quite recently she was showered with proposals while making a lecture tour in the mining regions of Nevada, she still lives a single and apparently contented life. At any rate Miss Foley has no complaint to vent about her personal lot and only laughs when asked why she hasn't accepted one of the many offers she has already received from admiring men. However, what she has to say of the general situation may be significant at that. She said:

"It is my opinion that the average young man of today is not earning money enough to properly support a wife. There are many girls keeping the company of young men who are making less than $12 a week. The girls in many cases are making that much themselves. Consequently they cannot see what they would benefit themselves by marriage. Many too have seen their friends get married to men of small salaries and they have seen too many of these marriages fail. They have seen the wife returning to her work to help support the family. Rather than meet a similar fate many girls prefer the single life. If they must work they would rather stay single and free. They can then enjoy themselves and their wages as they see fit.

"Of course this is a deplorable thing—but it still remains the fact. This low-wage problem is a serious one. How it can be remedied, however, I don't know. While it exists there will be fewer and fewer marriages. To me this seems the principal cause of the trouble. It is not the men, nor the women, or even our social conditions—it is a sole question of money, that's all."

Below are some of the many interesting letters already at hand.

"BE STEPPED ASIDE."

Right Man Editor, Boston AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—You ask why so many eligible young women are growing old and single because they cannot find a husband. I can tell you of my personal case in a very few words. I believe that it is typical of many others. I lay it to the folly of that social law—if that's what they call it—which forbids a woman to propose. It is the fear of ridicule that prevents thousands of girls from adding some bashful lover to say the fateful words.

At any rate that was my experience. I kept company with a most worthy young man for three years. Many times I thought he was about to propose, but he never did. Bashfulness alone prevented him. Fear of ridicule kept me from adding him and finally we parted, my friend evidently thinking it was the most manly thing he could have done under the circumstances. At any rate I have alw...ys believed that he stepped aside in order that I might accept the attentions of some other and more courageous youth. Needless to say there is no "other" and never will be.

LUCK PLAYS PART.

Right Man Editor, Boston AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—Having reached the age of thirty without being married, I have almost lost hope of finding a husband before it is too late. Why I have been passed by while other young women of less attractions have succeeded in reaching the altar is a mystery to me. I can account for it in only one way. They were lucky—and I wasn't. Or at least I haven't been to date.

Perhaps I am a little too fussy, but if that's the case I'll blame myself. It is my belief, however, that luck plays a big part in this matter of marriage. Some girls—and they are not always the "good-lookers"—have no trouble at all in finding a husband. Others—and they are just as worthy of attention—are persistently ignored. What can a girl do in a case like that? Perhaps if a girl could take the initiative herself there wouldn't be so many of us growing up into "old maids." But what would a man think of a girl who would dare propose?

"UNWED BY CHOICE."

Right Man Editor, Boston AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—You wonder why so many young women are facing spinsterhood. Perhaps what I say will surprise you. Many of them are facing it by choice.

Many girls are now earning self-supporting salaries. They do not need to marry. Consequently the man who asks their hand must show where he can better their station. As comparatively few men are able to offer the present-day girl a better lot than she now enjoys, marriages are falling off.

It is my belief that money, more than love, counts more with the girl of today. At any rate it does in my case, and I am not ashamed to admit it, either.

SULLIVAN POSTAL BILL IS ATTACKED

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—The Fitzgerald and Sullivan bills, giving the Postmaster General power to bar from the mails matter reflecting on any form of religious worship, were attacked today before the House committee on postoffices by Sanford H. Horton, secretary of the Columbia Alleliuiana Liberty Association.

"There is wrapped up in the proposed legislation a menace to the freedom of the press as well as religious liberty," said Horton.

"These bills give the postmaster-general absolute power to exclude from the mails 'pamphlets, pictures, prints, engravings, lithographs, pinographs, or other publications,' which are represented to be a reflection on any form of religious worship practiced in or held sacred by any citizen of the United States.

"We do not stand for publishing theories of an indecent, scurrilous or libelous character, but the terms of these two bills are too sweeping.

"A publication merely represented to be a reflection on some religious order might be excluded under such sweeping authority. I submit that there are laws on the statute books which protect men and women from libellous and defamatory statements."

Horton argued that the freedom of the press, guaranteed under the constitution, should not be so lightly regarded.

Prof. C. S. Longacre, secretary of the National Religious Liberty Association, also attacked the bills as "a trumpet blast from the reactionary forces for a renewal of the old struggle about the freedom of the press."

Nan Bates Again Newsgirl

May Call Divorce Suit Today

Two portraits of Nan Corrigan Bates, New York newsgirl bride of Attleboro millionaire.

Suing Wife "Glad to Earn Living; Done with Millionaires."

Nan Corrigan Bates, newsgirl bride of Frank M. Bates, an Attleboro millionaire, is back at a newsstand, the scene of the romance that led to her marriage. But for a few days a substitute is in her place at a New York hotel, as the suit for divorce she has brought is expected to be called today at Taunton.

From behind the counter Mrs. Bates said today, preparatory to leaving for Taunton:

"I am glad to be earning my own money again. He said alarm clock that gets me out of bed at five in the morning sounds better to me than the toot of any automobile.

"I have had enough of wealthy men and costly clothes, brick-a-brac and furniture. There are things far more precious to me than. I have always wanted a comfortable home, a good husband and children and what did I get? These grafters show only too plainly that my life as the wife of a millionaire was not wholly joyful.

"To live any longer under the conditions I was living would have driven me mad. I am going to try and forget it and begin all over again."

When the Vanderbilt Hotel in New York was opened three years ago not the least of the attractions was Nan Corrigan, whose sparkling eyes and friendly smile helped her to sell more books and papers from her stand than any other newsgirl in town.

The attractive newsgirl was responsible for the patronage of at least two of the hotel's richest guests. One of them was Frank Merton Bates. He saw Miss Corrigan, promptly became a reader of the latest best sellers and his visit of one week lengthened.

On June 4, 1912, they were married and the young bride became popular in Attleboro society. The couple were very happy and their wedding was hailed as a love match. Attleboro was surprised when Mrs. Bates filed her libel for divorce some months ago.

Mrs. Bates alleges gross and confirmed habits of intoxication, cruel and abusive treatment and neglect to provide for her support.

USE ANTI-KAMNIA TABLETS

Dr. J. J. Caldwell says that this exceedingly distressing disease does not exist in life, but does not appear to be curable. Sufferers from this affliction are condemned to undergo the periodical attacks every few weeks until they are forty years of age, after which the attacks are less frequent, and finally disappear entirely. Palliative measures during the attack are all that it is possible to suggest, while care in the diet is the best preventive measure. An attack may often be prevented by taking two Anti-kamnia Tablets when the first symptoms appear, and one Anti-kamnia Tablet every two hours during the attack shortens it, eases the pain and brings rest and quiet.

Anti-kamnia may be obtained at all druggists. Ask for A-K Tablets. They quickly relieve all pain.

BOSTON SCHOONER SWAIN WRECKED

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—When the schooner Frank E. Swain of Boston capsized seventy-five miles southeast of Cape Henry she anchored herself to the bottom of the sea, and will have to be blown up to clear the path of navigation.

This report was made today to coastguard headquarters by Captain Uburroth of the cutter Seminole. It is not known here what became of her crew.

Captain Uburroth reported the schooner's anchors were loose on deck when she turned over and they are now securely fastened on the bottom.

SEEN AT SIGN OF THE SACRED COD

With the approach of the crucial fight on Woman's Suffrage, Senator Henry G. Wells of Haverhill says the opposition will muster not more than five votes in the Senate. Mr. Wells will vote against it, as said Insider in the Pen for that Senator Wells has fought to the finish and they're glad of it. Senator Wells includes Senators Tufts of Waltham, Fay of Medford and Ellis of Newton in his list of "possibles." If the Senator's figures are correct, Woman's Suffrage should win in the Senate, thirty-five to five.

"Boy Legislator" Clears the Bases.

Representative Daniel W. Coyne of Boston, the "boy-orator" of the House, who is the youngest member, and Representative Daniel H. Hart, successor of Councillor-elect John A. Hand, announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for Governor. Mr. Coyne's friends surmise that he is taking stock of his "fences" and that he may run for Lieutenant-Governor. Mr. Hart and Mr. Ham have each scored a victory over the other.

Council Door Was Closed by Mistake.

The Council door is shut again. It was closed, according to Lieutenant-Governor Cushing, through a "mistake." In order to correct that "mistake" the Council took the "trouble" at the close of its last meeting to issue a statement announcing some appointments that it had confirmed. Shortly after the "mistake" was called to Mr. Cushing's attention by some other person than Speaker Cox the announcement was made that Mr. Cushing would be a candidate for Governor. Meanwhile the Council has committed itself to the Democratic policy of an "open door" and public meetings.

Washburn Puts Ryan on Defensive.

Representative John D. Ryan of Holyoke, when put into a defensive attitude by Representative Robert M. Washburn of Worcester at once became the defender of Boniface's political morals. Ryan accused the Hampden Railroad Corporation of double-dealing from the beginning to the present stage of its doubtful existence. "Holyoke did the biggest job of double-dealing last year when it dropped over night after agreeing to a bill that we reported out of this committee on the Hampden Railroad situation," interjected Washburn. "You are absolutely right as usual," said Ryan. "We agreed to the bill in the committee but when the committee reported it out it bore no resemblance to the bill we agreed to and what the committee said it would report."

DR. RICHARD H. CREEL, Mayor's choice for health commissioner.

MAYOR FOR CREEL FOR HEALTH JOB

Dr. Richard H. Creel of the Federal Health Service is Mayor Curley's first choice for the new $7,500-a-year place as Boston's single-headed health commissioner.

The Mayor today said he was prepared to act on Dr. Creel's name at once, and, by the question before Dr. Creel in an effort to induce him to accept.

That Dr. Francis X. Mahoney, chairman of the present Board of Health, and Dr. H. H. Mudgett of the board will be provided for when the reorganization comes the Mayor's friends say is assured.

The present plan is to make them deputies with full salaries, but in the event of Mayor Curley failing to secure Dr. Creel as chief commissioner Dr. Mahoney may be given the position.

The latter is given a tinge of official sanction in the Mayor's flattering reference to the accomplishments of the Boston Board of Health in his inaugural address today. In which specific mention is made of the fact that Boston last year had the lowest death rate in the history of the city.

3 Burn to Death in Maine House

KING, WILLIAM, forty-three, Jay, formerly of Bath and Red River, Minn.

Caruso Gives Shoes to Breadline Man

NEW YORK, Feb. 1.—Men of the bread line are looking for more shoes and clothing from Enrico Caruso, the opera star, following his gifts to Emilio Shubert, twenty, who had headed the bread line at the Knickerbocker Hotel for the last three days. Shubert left the hotel moving to a new lodging, for he says he is with John Caruso's shoes and overcoat.

Kills 3 and Self With Silent Gun

NEW YORK, Feb. 1.—Investigation of the slaying of his wife and two daughters by Herman Auerbach in their apartment in Central Park West, shows that Auerbach, who afterwards killed himself, not only used a rifle equipped with a Maxim silencer, but dealt out four terrible deaths with what were in effect dumdum bullets. Four bullets only were fired and four ragged wounds that brought instant death resulted. There is every evidence the crime had been planned for several days.

A Fine Treatment For Catarrh

Easy to Make and Costs Little.

If you suffer from Catarrh, head noises, sore throat, asthma, or Catarrhal deafness, here is a fine recipe that often gives relief after many dollars have failed. Its effect in the worst cases is usually most striking and positive. The correct method of treating Catarrh we believe is to employ a remedy that will quickly relieve the catarrhal poisons from the system and at the same time by tonic action increase the vitality, which is always lowered by this insidious disease. To do this, we believe, the following formula will be found the best prescription, as it acts quickly, costs little and can be easily prepared at home:

From your druggist obtain one ounce of Parmint Double Strength; about 75c worth; this is sufficient. Into a pint bottle put a pint of hot water, add the Parmint and 1 teaspoonful of Sugar. Take a teaspoonful four times a day.

This will usually relieve the most distressing case of Catarrh in a few days, and even if of the most chronic nature it will be found to relieve the disagreeable symptoms that always accompany this disease.

Loss of smell, defective hearing and noises in the head are among the many symptoms that show the presence of catarrh. Relief from any one of these symptoms should encourage you by the use of the above prescription.

Every person who has Catarrh in any form should give this prescription a trial.—Advertisement.

The fourth week of the Boston AMERICAN'S great bowling contest promises to be the greatest ever from the standpoint of high scores and the number of entries.

Although the rollers have only had two days of actual bowling the contest editor has been swamped with scores, and the majority of them well over the 300 mark, which means some record of a pinfall when the fourth rolloff is held.

The women are coming forward in great numbers, and while their scores are naturally lower than the men's a marked increase in the number of entrants has been noted, and if they continue it may be necessary to have an extra prize for the women and possibly a rolloff for the various prizes.

TWO NEW RULINGS.

Two new rulings have been made regarding the contest, as follows:

No bowler who a member, or has been a member of any team in the City League, the Greater Boston League or the Suburban League, is eligible in the AMERICAN contest.

The weekly rolloff will hereafter have twenty contestants, the ten highest rollers, who have scored more than 350 and the ten rollers scoring 350 or under. If not more than ten have rolled 350 the leading ten will be eligible and the next ten in order.

These rulings will remove what little dissatisfaction has been discovered by a complete tour of Greater Boston alleys.

Hereafter the contest will be limited to amateur rollers, pure and simple, and the good bowlers who are not lucky enough to get over the 350 mark will still have a chance for the prizes.

TWENTY MEN IN ROLLOFF.

Next Saturday's rolloff will be the last of the ten contestants' affairs. The bowling for the fourth week's prizes will keep the twenty rollers of the two classes specified above busy.

The fourth week of the contest started last Thursday, at midnight and will close next Thursday night at midnight.

The following prizes will be awarded each week:

First Prize	$20.00
Second Prize	10.00
Third Prize	5.00
Special Woman's Prize	5.00

The prizes will consist of merchandise. You can have anything you want at any store you choose, to the value of the prize won, and the Boston AMERICAN will pay the bill. The merchandise prizes are given to protect you against becoming professionals.

NEW HANDICAP FOR BIG CIRCUIT

At the recent meeting of Grand Circuit stewards and newspaper men in Detroit every angle of the harness horse game was threshed out thoroughly, and nothing came in for any more discussion and a lot of commendation, too, than the Williams handicap system. This scheme of racing the trotter and pacer was originated by R. M. Williams, present secretary of the Empire City race track, where a big Grand Circuit meeting will be held this Summer, the week of August 30.

The chart accompanying this article gives the reader a most adequate idea of the scheme, which is a simple one, indeed. The horses are handicapped first by their record, second by known quality, and third, by distance, as shown in the chart. Three bells are used by the starter in this connection. First bell, horse is at the post assigned him, facing starter; second bell starts on a walk, and at the third bell, which follows immediately, the horse starts to trot or pace, as the case may be. Then there is a recall bell for a false go. The following table shows Mr. Williams' idea of the proper handicap for the horses, according to their best record.

2:05 horses, first second,	120 seconds to the mile—42.2
2:10 horses, first second,	120 seconds to the mile—40.8
2:15 horses, first second,	135 seconds to the mile—39.1
2:20 horses, first second,	140 seconds to the mile—37.7
2:25 horses, first second,	145 seconds to the mile—36.4

Mr. Williams suggests for the proper handicappers, the presiding judge, Grand Circuit secretary and local secretary.

He will give the system further trial at his meeting this Summer.

DIAMOND NOTES

JACK LELIVELT, THE FORMER NEW York outfielder, who figured in the trade for Joe Wood, has been signed to manage Cincinnati Club of the Central League.

HEINE PFEIL, THE OLD-TIME NATIONAL League outfielder, has been appointed umpire in the Central League.

NO MATTER HOW HE DECIDES THE case, Judge Landis is certain to be a vaudeville attraction.

IN THE WORDS OF JIMMY ISAMINGER: "After being out of it for several years, Larry Lajoie returns to fame again."

EMPIRE BILLY EVANS SAYS THERE ARE no Kevins good players to be had on the standing of two years' suspension, but there are a few of the same brand of baseball from the umpire's back.

PRESIDENT B. O. GRIMMER OF THE Pittsburgh Federals declares four minor leagues are ready to take care of ball players, but have neglected to be honest until Judge Landis makes baseball honest. Which is a fine tribute for the Judge, coming as it does from Mr. Grimmer, after the Judge's ruling practically let his outfield, Shoeless Joe Jackson, walk.

AL WAGNER, A BROTHER OF THE FAmous Hans, has been engaged to coach the baseball and national boxing teams at Yale. It is his last agreed to accept his offering, as Yale feels she can afford to pay as much as the indoor game as he is with the diamond.

THE BALTIMORE TERRAPINS HAVE DEcided upon a league for this season. The circuit is composed of Baltimore, Reading, Trenton and Kingston or Wilkes Barre. Jim and Mike Finnegan, Jack Dunn, Dan Howley and Mike Kelley have been the coaching staff, while Russell and Quinn, Bailey, Conroy, Smith and Reynolds are available as pitchers.

THE FEDERAL LEAGUE IS LEARNING its new wrinkles at the game. In Cuba, last week, Jimmy Johnson of the Rebels, scored a run for 1915 unless the Pittsburgh management interferes.

THE FEDS TRIED TO MAKE MUCH CAPital because Roger Bresnahan traded a player for a dog. Chick Griffith beat that record in 1904, when he traded Jake Stahl for a bone. Ask any one if ever saw Harry Black.

Food for Sport Fans

IN JUAREZ

In Juarez, down in Mexico,
A matador in times of woe
Remarked: "Believe me, Senor Bo,
My heart is full!
I thought, in happy days gone by,
That not a solitary guy
Was half so capable as I
To throw the bull.

"The señoritas in the stand
Would smile and whisper: 'Ain't he grand?'
And I was getting many a hand
And lots of fame,
When I performed the stands would fill,
And cheers would echo loud and shrill—
I was a famous guy until Jack Curley came."

Ring followers in the West, according to Jack Curley, are enthusiastic over the Johnson-Willard fight. The cheering is almost audible, with the aid of an ear trumpet, at a distance of one lack.

Jim Jeffries, having agreed to show Jess Willard how to whip Johnson, it behooves Joe Birmingham to show George Stallings how to win pennants.

Pete Standridge, a Cub recruit, is said to use the "fork ball," but most recruits are not on speaking terms with a fork.

"The motives for starting the Federal League were entirely sordid," says Charley Thomas. We are beginning to suspect that some persons are in baseball to make money.

Imagine what would have happened if Charles W. Murphy's motives had been entirely sordid. He might have run that shoestring into a million.

HANK IS IMMUNE.

Said Hank O'Day: "I do not fear to umpire for the Feds,
For once upon a time I worked a season with the Feds."

There can't be any truth to the rumor that there has been friction between Doc Johnson and Joe Birmingham. Joe is going to give Doc a reprieve.

SIXTEEN BIG LEAGUERS GET BUSY TONIGHT

THE existing tie for second place in the Amateur Boston Pin League will be broken tonight, when Colonial rolls Winthrop Y. C. at Winthrop, but matters may again come back to the same deadlock after Oxford rolls A. B. C. tomorrow night.

* * *

COLONIAL and Oxford are neck and neck in the running for the championship, with 32 points won and 20 lost and the rollers on both teams declare they will exert themselves this week in order that one team alone will hold the position.

* * *

COTTAGE PARK Y. C. is leading the league by a small margin, and the men on this team will have to continue their good rolling to retain their position at the top. Cottage Park rolls B. A. A. on its own lanes this evening. City rolls at Dudley in the third match of the night.

* * *

TOWANDO now has a clear lead of two points over Malden in the Mystic Valley League. Kenwood and Melrose are tied for third place, and Newtowne is but one point in the rear. The league is furnishing all kinds of thrills this season, and it is predicted that four teams will be in the fight for the leading position until the league comes to a close.

* * *

THE Medford City League has on its roster many star bowlers, and thirty-two men of the forty in the league have individual averages of 90 or better. The Winthrop team is leading the league by six points and bids fair to win the championship.

* * *

THE Chelsea team of the Suburban League will go to Worcester tonight to roll the Casino team, the leaders of the Worcester City League. Timmy Burns' men will leave the South Station on the 5:52 train, fully confident of trimming Sanderson's quartet.

* * *

PAUL POEHLER has fallen down in his bowling the last two weeks, with the result he is now tied with Archie Walsh for individual honors, with an average of 93.

* * *

THE Brass Shop team of the Walworth League has finally lifted itself from last position in the league standing, jumping ahead of the Pattern Shop team by one point.

* * *

ROBBINS of the Walworth team was the "goat" of the Blake & Knowles' rosters. He was mistaken for a dancing instructor by his poses and peculiar strides while bowling. The "two-by-one-ish" of the Blake & Knowles crowd, however, could not make him demonstrate a few of his new steps.

* * *

J. MORAN is still leading Pioffi for the individual honors in the Furniture League by a small fraction of a point. These men have been in a practical tie since the season opened and big fellows remain close together till the league season comes to a close.

* * *

THE bowling championship of Quincy will be decided this week in a big tournament at Wardwell's alleys. The twenty-four men rolling the highest five strings in one day will qualify. These twenty-four will roll off tonight. The high twelve men will go into the contest again on Tuesday night, and the six high men will roll in the championship round Wednesday night. A championship cup will be awarded the winner.

* * *

R. SUSMAN of No. 53 Hanover street owner of three bowling alleys in Boston, suggests the forming of an association of bowling alley owners and managers similar to such organizations of other business men.

* * *

EFFORTS to form a bowling league at Harvard have fallen through, mainly because the rollers cannot arrange hours agreeable to all parties concerned. Manager Billy Jackson of the Red Dragon alley is going to offer a cup to the Harvard man rolling the best average in a certain number of weeks. All bowlers will be considered, and the ten men showing the best pinfall will meet in an effort to win the trophy, and with it the unofficial championship of the University.

CAPTAIN ARCHIE GREES of the Cambridge Trust four would like to meet other bowling teams at the Red Dragon alleys or away from home.

THE race for first place in the Corporation Bowling League has narrowed down to the point where only three points separate the first three teams—the New England Telephone & Telegraph Company, the United Drug Company and the Boston & Maine Railroad.

* * *

THE United Drug Company team, which is in second place, has the honor of being the only team that has taken, or can take, the majority of points away from the Telephone team.

* * *

ALTHOUGH being rated about twenty-five points per string less than the Telephone team, the United Drug team has trimmed the Bell boys three out of four points on three successive occasions.

ZEWITZ and Ralph, the eighteen-year-old champions of Springfield, defeated Rennig and Arale of the Bowdoin Square alleys in a ten-string match by 1,366 to 1,295. They will meet in a return match next Thursday night at Springfield.

FRANKIE MACK TO BATTLE WALTER BUTLER AT LAWRENCE CLUB THURSDAY EVENING

FRANK MACK and Walter Butler—two of New England's classiest lightweight boxers—will settle a ring dispute of long standing before the Unity Cycle Club in Lawrence Thursday night. The tussle should be a rugged affair as there is considerable rivalry between the two boys.

Mack and Butler both hail from Beachmont. They first gained a knowledge of boxing while members of Charley Madden's "stable" of boxers. The two boys engaged in numerous friendly gymnasium bouts, but whenever they met ,they furnished the onlookers with a spirited whirl.

Mack finally quit Madden. He joined forces with Leo Flynn of New York, who manages a score of husky glove men. Since Mack has been with Flynn he has experienced considerable success and today is entitled to a bout with Matty Baldwin for the lightweight championship of New England. Frankie recently gave "Young" Shugrue a hard fifteen-round battle, which proves that he possesses plenty of class.

AFTER Mack left Madden, Butler came to the front with rapid strides. He then tried to secure an engagement with Mack. The latter, however, refused to meet him. "Go get a reputation," asserted Mack. To make a long story short, Butler did not waste any time in going out and building a name for himself. His aggressive style of fighting combined with an ability to give and take a punch, enabled him to fight his way to the front ranks of the local lightweights.

MACK and Butler should put up an interesting encounter. Mack is a fast, clever, shifty boxer with a punch, while Butler is an aggressive two-handed fighter. He says that his body punch will work Mack down and ultimately cause the downfall of Leo Flynn's protege. Mack comes right back and claims that he will give Butler a boxing lesson. Each boy has a host of followers. They are going to Lawrence Thursday night in special cars and will root hard for their favorite to breze in a winner.

THE press bureau of the Johnson-Willard bout comes to bat with an interesting story about the coming tussle. The yarn points out how Willard has a chance to win. We print it herewith, at its face value:

"'Were I asked what I considered the biggest asset in favor of Jess Willard's chances in his coming fight with Jack Johnson,' said one who has followed every championship fight in the last thirty years, 'I would unhesitatingly answer that the white wing in favor of Willard is the number of experts, and so-called sporting authorities, who are picking him for a sure loser.'

"That the betting angle, as well as the expert opinions, count for little can easily be figured out by taking a look at 99 out of every 100 championship fights in the last thirty years. Let us start with the Corbett-Sullivan fight, which took place in New Orleans in 1891. You could count on the fingers of one hand the number of critics in the entire world who gave Corbett even the outside chance to win. The betting was 5 to 1 against him, and thousands of dollars of Sullivan money could not be covered even at that price.

"WHEN Corbett was defeated by Bob Fitzsimmons he ruled an overwhelming favorite. Jack Jeffries made his New York city debut under the management of the late Billy Delaney, intended to defeat Bob Armstrong and Steve O'Donnell in two months time. He took on Armstrong first and his attempt at stopping the rangy man proved an utter failure. Jeffries claimed he broke his arm and was laughed out of the ring. The O'Donnell end of it was called off and every expert and critic at the ringside branded Jeffries as the biggest pugilistic joke of the age.

"The big fellow, heartbroken, but still full of ambition and confidence in his own prowess, returned to Los Angeles and, for a time, worked in the old boiler factory. A year later he returned East and Billy Delaney, with the assistance of Billy Brady, matched Jeffries against Bob Fitzsimmons for the heavyweight championship. The match was ridiculed, laughed at, and in every way considered a joke, still Jeffries won with a clean knockout in eleven rounds.

"For a time the writers could not offer any explanation and readily gave circulation to the story that Fitzsimmons was doped. Subsequent happenings, however, refuted that story and Jeffries was voted the greatest heavyweight that ever lived.

"EVEN after several years layoff, determined to remain on the retired list, public opinion, which grew into an absolute demand, forced Jeffries back into the ring to uncrown Jack Johnson, who had reached the top rung of the pugilistic ladder by defeating Tommy Burns, who became champion by virtue of Jeffries' retirement. This time Tommy Burns won the title from Marvin Hart at Los Angeles with the betting 3½ to 1 against him.

"Given with Jeffries' absence from the ring, and five years added to his life, the sport public and critics made him an overwhelming favorite in the betting and ring history tells what an utter mistake it proved to bring Jeffries back into the game.

"So much for the heavyweight ranks, which applies as well to every other class of pugilism, as for instance, if you will recall the Pedlar Palmer-McGovern fight, the McGovern-Corbett outcome, the Britt-Nelson battle, Coulon-Williams, Dempsey-Fitzsimmons, and many others too numerous to mention. Study past history, consisting of many surprises and upsets of expert dope."

WAR SURE ON RULE TO SILENCE COACH

The proposition to shoo the football coach into the stands during all contests, where he is expected to act as would any other spectator at the game is bound to cause a lively discussion when the football referee convenes at the Hotel Biltmore, New York on Friday and Saturday of this week.

Parke H. Davis, the eminent football statistician, is behind the move, which seeks to strip all power from the head coach of a football team when contests are on and place the captain in command.

The professional coach nowadays moves his players about much as one does pawns on a chess board and in at least one instance since Head Coach Haughton has been in charge at Harvard has his foresight as exercised from the sidelines brought his eleven through with a victory over Yale.

No material changes in the playing rules are expected, according to H. JC. Hall, Chairman of the Rules Committee, the amendments to be considered dealing principally with the technical side of the game.

Substitution will be discussed and a proposition to put in the captain the sole right to call in extra players will be offered.

Another proposed regulation is that the subs go right to their places and without waiting to any other members of the team.

One novel suggestion that is apt to find much favor is for the removal of the goal posts ten yards directly back of where they are now located, which would place the uprights on the line of the forward pass zone.

Such a rule would prevent the players from injuring themselves by jamming up against the posts and with drop kicking from the forty-yard line now an established custom rather than a novelty would not place much of a handicap on the drop or placement field goal kickers.

New Cue Star Makes Debut Here Tonight

One of the best billiard matches of the entire season is slated for this evening when Calvin Demarest and Marcus Catton meet at the Imperial parlors. This will be Catton's first appearance in this city, but those who remember the ability of his father at the balk-line game will readily realize that the boy has inherited the delicacy of touch and faultless execution that made Marcus, senior so prominent in the billiard world.

"The Rabbit's" Column

By Walter J. Maranville

SHORTSTOP ON THE BRAVES

Say, fellows, I guess I started something!

I was simply snowed under by the letters that came pouring in today from readers of this column in answer to the offer I made of a couple of tickets to the Braves' opening game. Haven't had time to open them all yet, but hope tomorrow to be able to print a few of the selections in order to show how the fans are picking up the teams.

For those readers who didn't happen to see the offer, I will repeat it here:

I will give a couple of tickets to the opening game to the fan who selects the best team for the managers of the American and National leagues from players whose names begin with the same initial as the managers'.

For example, Manager Donovan of the Yanks could have Doak, Davis, Daubert, Derrick, etc.; Jennings could have Jansen, Jahvrin, Jackson, Johnson and so on, and Manager Robinson of the Brooklyns could have Rucker, Reulbach, Rickert, Rudolph, while Manager Griffith could have Gandil, Gregg, Gilbert, Groh, Grant and others whose name begins with G.

Only players that took part in last season's contests in the two big leagues will be considered. Send your lists to "The Rabbit's Managers Contest, care Boston American." Here is a list of the big league managers:

Birmingham, Cubs.
Bresnahan, Cubs.
Carrigan, Red Sox.
Clarke, Pittsburgh.
Donovan, Yanks.
Griffith, Washington.
Herzog, Cincinnati.
Huggins, Cardinals.
Jennings, Detroit.
McGraw, Giants.
Mack, Athletics.
Moran, Phillies.
Hickey, Browns.
Robinson, Brooklyn.
Rowland, White Sox.
Stallings, Braves.

Only three pitchers and two catchers allowed one team.

* * *

Billy Sullivan, the veteran White Sox catcher, and one of the greatest authorities on pitching connected with baseball, says he has discovered a new method of using the "emery ball," the delivery of which was ruled out of the game last Summer. The obnoxious emery which is needed in preparing the ball is not needed.

The ball will not have to be scratched, he says, but will come mutilated like it was with emery paper. The substitute can be placed on the pitcher's mitt and the ball without any extra motion that would attract the attention of the batter. It can be wiped off after the ball is pitched, without anyone being the wiser.

John McGraw made up his mind to get Hans Lobert more than a year ago. The Giants were playing the Phillies and in the practice before the game the Giant manager declared, on the hearing of all the players that Jim Thorpe was the fastest runner in the big leagues.

"He can't beat me," said Hans Lobert.

"How's that?" said McGraw. "I've got $25 he can beat you."

"Make it $50," rejoined Hans, and the wager was on. A roughly measured course of 100 yards was marked off and Lobert and Thorpe were sent away to a perfect start.

The Indian led for the first fifty yards, but then Lobert caught him and won by at least a couple of strides.

After the bet had been paid, McGraw remarked that Lobert had plenty of nerve to make the bet and speed enough to win it, and from that day every time McGraw looked at Lobert he broke a commandment by ardently coveting a player who belonged to a neighboring manager, for in the McGraw system of play nerve counts 51 per cent. and speed is 48.

Rev. Dr. J. Leonard Levy told Stove Leaguers of Pittsburgh Thursday night of the invasion of America some twenty years ago by a crack team of English cricketers. The cricketers were taken to the old Phillies' ball park, where they watched the baseball players hammer the ball in practice. The Britons were taken on the field and allowed to use their wicked bats against the delivery of Jack Taylor, with Clements catching. Taylor threw some straight ones and the Britons were fearful when they succeeded in driving the ball far out of bounds. "Taylor allowed them to become real cocky," laughed Dr. Levy, "and Clements signed for a curve. The Englishman swung and missed. Again came a curve and another cricketer looked puzzled. Taylor threw some straight ones and the Britons were fearful when they succeeded in driving the ball far out of bounds. "Taylor allowed them to become real cocky," laughed Dr. Levy, "and Clements signed for a curve. The Englishman swung and missed. Again came a curve and another cricketer looked puzzled. Taylor threw some straight ones and the glee of the Britons turned to disgust. The curve was something unknown to them.

The Chicago Americans will be the first major league club to start spring training this year. The White Sox are billed to leave Chicago on February 18 or 19 for California. They will leave Chicago on a special train of several cars and will go direct to Paso Robeles, Cal. They will remain at the training camp only about two weeks and will then split up into two teams and begin exhibition tours which will wind up in Chicago a day or two before the championship season opens on April 15.

Thus the White Sox will work out in their camp and at various ball parks for eight weeks before the pennant race starts. The White Sox will be through their preliminary work before the major league clubs get started with their training.

Manager Rowland, who has succeeded Jimmy Callahan as the manager of the White Sox, has fairly fixed on his roster, and the indications are that every one of them will be taken on the trip to the Coast.

George Wiltse, former star southpaw of the New York Giants, wishes that Hughie Jennings would at least have the patience to wait until he is appointed a manager. The Tech manager wrote to Hooks the other day informing him that he could let him have a good catcher for 1915.

"What does Hugh want to with a catcher on one for," said Uncle George. "Does he think because I am a pitcher and was released I now need a catcher to hold me?"

Wiltse, however, wrote to Jennings, saying that he is not yet a manager, but if he does get the job as pilot of the Providence Internationals he will be glad to take over his catcher.

PALM BEACH, Fla., Feb. 1—Sixty-five players have entered the Lake Worth Golf Tourney which starts today with an eighteen-hole qualification round.

W. J. Travis, Garden City, a former National Amateur champion of Great Britain and United States, is the present title holder and is here to defend his laurels.

H. M. Forrest, Lakewood; H. P. Farrington, Woodland; V. C. Longely, Tawtoulai; are the other low handicap players. Boston also has C. M. Bratt, C. F. Bacon and C. W. Cole of Woodland and Dras Burn respectively. L. A. Crossett and R. A. Swan of Worcester.

Fisher Signed Up for Three Years at $19,500 Salary

MIDDLEBURY, Vt., Feb. 1—Ray J. Fisher, pitcher of the New York Americans, says that he has signed a three-year contract with that club. It is understood that his contract calls for a salary of $19,500 for three years. He will leave some time in February to join his team for Spring practice.

Fisher has resigned his position as physical director at Middlebury which he has held for several years. He will be succeeded by Edwin W. Holmes of the Springfield, Mass., Y. M. C. A. College, who will take up his duties here in September.

Skin Infection Holds Up Tech's Wrestling Meet

STATE COLLEGE, Pa., Feb. 1—Penn State's wrestling meet with Massachusetts Tech, scheduled for today, has been indefinitely postponed on account of skin infection among the New England grapplers.

A dispatch from Boston advised State's management that Tech's team was suffering with impetigo contagiosa and for this reason the officials were willing to risk the spread of the infection. It was decided that the outbreak was of mild form and had been contracted by the wrestlers while working on the mat.

FRANCIS OUIMET WON FAME AS GOLFE R IN SINGLE DAY

Francis Ouimet's meteoric career is one of the wonders of the sporting world. Practically unknown a little more than a year ago, today he is acknowledged to be one of the greatest golfers in the world. And what is more, he is sure to improve in the next few years.

Ouimet leaped into fame in September, 1913, when he met and defeated Harry Vardon, five times professional champion of England, and Edward Ray, another British champion, in the open championship of the United States at Brookline.

Though but twenty years of age when he faced the veteran English golfers, Ouimet played with amazing steadiness, and at the end of the seventy-two hole competition tied with them with 304 strokes. In the play off the following day Ouimet, though his greatest admirers didn't think he could, captured the title with a card of 72, against Vardon's 77 and Ray's 78.

ENTERED UNDER PROTEST.

When it is taken into consideration that the young American entered the open championship tournament under protest, feeling that he had no right to play against such a fine field, it must be realized that his performance was one of the greatest ever put up by a kid just out of his teens.

Since winning the open title in 1913 Ouimet has won and lost in many tournaments, but this year he was victorious in the American amateur championship and the Massachusetts amateur tournament, besides capturing first place in many minor events.

Ouimet was practically born and raised on a golf course. He was born May 8, 1893, in Clyde street, Brookline, near the seventeenth green of the Brookline Country Club course. Naturally, having golf right in front of his nose all day and nearly every day in the year, he took an interest in the game at a very early age. Golf balls and clubs were his playthings. At nine he was a caddy on the Brookline links and soon showed promise of becoming a fine player.

Alec and Mac Campbell, the best players of the club, taught Ouimet a lot, for they took great interest in the youngster and from that he naturally fell into the game.

BEATEN IN FIRST TOURNEY.

When fifteen years of age Ouimet played in the Boston Interscholastic tournament for the first time. Though he qualified he was beaten in the second round. The following Spring (1910) he won the tournament and in the following year successfully defended his title.

In 1911 and 1912 Ouimet entered many club and open tournaments, meeting with great success, and he had by no means become a very strong golfer. In the Massachusetts State tournament he went to the final round and was beaten by Heinrich Schmidt for the title. He also took part in the amateur championship that season.

Ouimet started the season of 1913, the season during which he was to prove the sensation of the golfing world, by winning the Massachusetts State championship. He then entered the amateur championship at Garden City and was well in the lead at the end of the first day's play. In the second round, however, he met Jerome D. Travers, the eventful winner, and was beaten.

Knowing that he would have to meet the best professional players on the world in the open championship and realizing that he had little chance against them, Ouimet decided not to enter that tournament, although it was held on his home course at Brookline. President Watson of the United States Golf Association pressed him to enter and he finally did so under protest.

TIES WITH VETERANS.

When play began in the biggest tournament he had ever entered Ouimet soon showed that he had not overestimated his ability. He not only played great nerve and confidence in the tightest pinches and made a sensational finish, but even won a tie with Vardon and Ray.

At the end of the first round of Thirty-six holes Ouimet was four strokes behind Vardon and two behind Ray. The morning round of the second day's play changed all this, for in spite of rain and raw atmosphere the Brookline youngster got a chance to pick up a stroke here and there and stood at the end of the eighteen holes he had caught the Britishers with a 77 and the three started all even for the last eighteen holes. Each turned in a card of 78, so it was a three-handed tie for first honors.

The youthful American and the veteran Britishers fought it out the following day, and victory went to the last. It was thought he had no chance to win, but he came through with a 79, the thirty-six holes had been played, but Ouimet played a wonderful game, while the veterans did the opposite.

BLAMES GRIF FOR JOHNSON'S JUMP

CHICAGO, Feb. 1—Clark Griffith is accused by Fielder Jones of giving baseball the hardest jolt of any one in the last year because he induced Walter Johnson to become a contract jumper, thus shattering the idol of the baseball world. "Grif is more to blame for the action of Walter Johnson than Walter himself," said the leader of the Sinfelds, who was in attendance at the big baseball trial.

"There is no question at all but that Johnson believed he had a perfect right to sign with the Feds," continued Jones, because he had kept faith with the Washington club and had given it the opportunity to bid for his services after the offer he had received from me.

"Then came the flood of abuse that was handed out by the American magnates because he had signed with the Feds. No one could have acted in a more honorable way than he had. The whole fault, as far as I can see, lies in the fact that Griff and his lawyers without having sense of his own friends along with him.

"It is almost a certainty that any man will would be broken in the course of a five-hour conference counsel with seven men opposing him, as was Johnson. He never should have consented to go into a closed room unless he had as many men on his side as Griff had.

"Now Johnson is discredited by baseball for the time being, yet, but the blame should be laid at Griffith's door instead of at the pitcher's."

Chess Club Tourney to Open February 13

Entries for the annual chess tournament held by the Boylston Chess Club will close February 12, and play in the tournament will begin on Saturday, February 14.

All adjourned or postponed games must be finished before the following Saturday.

Women Making Hobbies of Themselves

Talented Actress Says There Is Much Beauty Going to Waste

By GRACE ELLISTON

THERE is so much beauty going to waste in the world! And what is more, there are so many unsung heroines! If anyone would only mention the two how much better it would be for everyone!

The thing to do, then, is to make a hobby of one's self. That may sound selfish, but it isn't. It is only common sense. Then, too, I don't think it is ever selfish to make a hobby of one's charms to the extent of preventing the world from producing one more homely woman. Yes, it is really as important as that.

The thing that women of today are doing is frequently obliterating any beauty that they may have through a misunderstanding of what they possess. Unless you understand your type and know exactly how to set about bringing out your good points you will frequently go too far in the other direction, quite unconsciously, till you come up against a good friend who may give you a jumping.

Often girls come to me and in detail ask me how to make up so as to accentuate their good points. On the stage, we use "make up" to alter or what we really don't notice. Some of us are fortunate enough to be beautiful, others are not, and to the clever actor goes the credit for making the best features they have and no one to work to accentuate them. That is exactly what must be done off the stage. A girl should study her best features and subordinate all her other less attractive ones so that a person first meeting her will not look no further than her prettiest feature and judge the rest accordingly. It may be easier to say than do, but it means lots of work. All beauty comes essentially from the health and no disease about it. I don't care if her features are perfect, is attractive.

She must be clever about something else she can wear, have a brain, especially if she is to be an actress, and people will say after she has lived a lifetime that they never thought she was pretty. They will say she had the features, but she didn't understand how to make them stand out.

I should advise every girl to walk. Learn to do it correctly and you can't lose some feature that is worth improving or putting on exhibition. I would wear a corset to the girl who had the most marvelous eyelashes I have ever seen, and yet there is nothing else that could be personally attractive, not even her eyes.

But she was determined to be pretty, and so she cultivated that eyelash. She made them darker and more curly and beautiful than they were, and in time people noticed the way they curled away from her eyes and remarked about it. One thing led to another, and she was soon considered dangerously attractive. Just because of her lashes.

Any girl can do the same if she wants to badly enough, and any one can look homely at will—we all know that. Only never to look homely, even when I am alone, think that helps, too.

His Little Mistake

Mrs. Smith had asked Mr. Smith more than fifty times (so she said) when he was going to varnish the kitchen floor. Finally, in desperation, one Saturday afternoon, he pushed his overalls and went at it. Monday morning it had not dried a bit.

"Something's wrong with this varnish, John. Where did you put the can?"

"I put it back on the cellar shelf," he answered, absently, from the depths of his paper.

She came back into the room presently with the can and stood in front of him, confronting him. He looked so he looked up. She held the can toward him.

"Can't you read, John? You've varnished the kitchen floor with golden syrup!"

ITCHING NEARLY DROVE A WHOLE FAMILY CRAZY

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 24, 1914.—"My husband had a rash all over his body, and soon the WHOLE FAMILY was in the condition. It looked scaly and raised up on the arms and body in big bumps. The trouble burned and itched so that it would nearly drive one crazy. It was always worse at night, so we could not sleep. We all had the trouble for about two or three years, and during that time tried many remedies and prescriptions with no results. We tried Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap and it RELIEVED AT ONCE and before the third jar of ointment had been used, we were all completely cured. It has been four months since we were cured, and there are no traces of the trouble." —(Signed) Mrs. S. A. Clarkson, 1620 Lawn Ave.

A Screaming Serial of Love and Laughter

Based on the Great Comedy Success of the Same Name

The wife—played by Grace Carlyle.

The lawyer—played by Fritz Williams.

The sweetheart—played by Oza Waldrop.

The quarreling partners—played by Sam B. Hardy and Frank McIntyre.

(Based on the entertaining play by Edward Peple, now playing at Ye Wilbur Theatre, Copyright, 1914, by International News Service, sole owner of serial publication.)

Novelized
By A. A. WATERBURY,
Novelizer of "The Family Cupboard," "At Bay," etc., etc.

THE red headed office boy smiled at the golden haired stenographer.

"Say! If you was my wife, you know what I would do?"

"Wife!" At the magic word, a dreamy look came into Sally Parker's eyes and she gazed "over the hills and far away," into a region where there were no clicking keys or stenographic notes. Her face took on the sweetly triumphant look a woman assumes when receiving a proposal.

"What would you do?" she asked coyly.

"I'd take you on a weddin' trip—to de very end of de world!" said James of the slick red pompadour, sentimentally. "And then I'd drop you off," he added.

She shifted her gum belligerently and made a quick little movement that was half anger and half amusement. Jimmy took life red hair and his equally red ears out of target range.

"No fightin'—we ain't the bosses, yer know!" said he.

Sally eazed after the boy thoughtfully and gave her gum chewing a bit of added vigor.

"So, even he notices it! Say, Kromie, do you ever wonder how long our jobs at the Eureka Pill Emporium are a-goin' to last? Sometimes I get to wonderin' if one of the bosses won't force the other to swallow some of the pills some day, and so dissolve the firm, sudden like!"

The elderly clerk she had addressed as "Kromie" looked up from his desk on the opposite side of the room.

"I don't see why the bosses can't get on. A big, fine business increasing every month—and yet they are quarrelling and fighting all day long. Sometimes I wonder if we are safe to stay with a firm that may put itself out of business any day."

There was ample cause for Krome to fear for the Eureka Digestive Pill Company. Internal dissension was always threatening its little kingdom. Six years before George Nettleton's father had passed on to the reward of a good and faithful country doctor. His most valuable heritage to his only surviving relative had been the formula of the pill with which he had regulated the digestions of half the population of the little Connecticut town where he practiced. So George took his magic formula and his pretty wife to New York and stormed the castle of fortune unavailingly. Just when things were looking darkest for the Eureka Pills he and the young Nettletons, a letter came from George's uncle, who had stayed "back home" to invite fortune as the proprietor of Thomaston's chief drug emporium.

"You've got a fine pill," he wrote. "The public ought to 'fall' made to swallow it. If I sell out here and come to the 'big city' with $500 and a practical selling idea I'm bound to a business that's yelling for help, will I find you ready to hand over a half interest in the Eureka Pills?"

A QUICK ANSWER.

Nettleton had used up a much needed quarter in a telegram that said: "In the name of Hercka, come!" And with $500, an acquaintance among the druggists of Connecticut and a harmless purple coloring that made the pills look good enough to eat, T. Boggs Johns had proved a very partner in need.

The Nettletons moved from a Harlem lodging house to an apartment on One Hundred and Fourteenth street, and the partners congratulated themselves on the alliance that had spelled prosperity. But as prosperity began to spell herself in capital letters, and T. Boggs Johns took an expensive suite of bachelor apartments, and the Nettletons blossomed out in a house in the East Seventies, dissensions rose and sank again in huge clouds that fairly threatened to blot out the business. Puffed up with success, each man came to regard himself as the man who had made the business. The partners began fairly to hate each other. Nettleton regarded himself as single author of their united fortunes, because his had been the formula for the pills. He wanted the firm's advertising to glorify him. Johns was sure his purple coloring had been the cause of victory, and he wished to be glorified in the firm's advertising. The men were no longer partners who had united to sell a purple pill, they were men who had a little article for sale that they wished to have make them known as individual "captains of finance." So the boys with the dangerous weapon of man, money and power, had these warring partners become, and their jealousy and overweening ambition and unreasoning hatred of one another were to bring strange things to pass to the offices of their company before the day was over.

But at the suggestion of what she had for months been fearing, namely, that the firm would break itself on the wheel of its own price, Sally Parker deserted her work to come and have a bit of a chat with Krome. An outsider might have said that she wanted to indulge in a little feast of gossip. Sally high-mindedly told her self that something had to be done to save the business, and that she and Krome were the very people to do it. "Ways and means." She left her desk and came over to the big centre table.

There she arranged herself in a deep leather chair, and, crossing her knees luxuriously, she pulled out a handkerchief, and with that and the palm of her hand as buffer, she improved the moment by brightening the already incandescent lustre of her pink nails.

At this moment Sally's philosophy was worth more than passing attention, but so was Sally's self, and Krome gave an undivided allegiance to what his eyes beheld rather than to what his ears might drink in. He preferred a view of Sally's gray "silk-where-they-show" stockings to all her pearls of wisdom anent the Eureka Digestive Pill Company.

"We're safe enough as long as the business goes on fooling the public and making money. Vanity makes 'em fight, and it will keep 'em from reforming, too. Neither one of the bosses alone would have anything. Mr. Nettleton doped out a good recipe for the insides of a pill and Mr. Johns is wise to a fine purple coloring and a box that looks as if it went with bonbons, and the two together go. But it's fierce how the bosses stand yelping at each other to see which of them discovered America, by making these wonders."

"I'm grateful for my job, Miss Parker. If you please one boss, the other one fires you."

"And all you have to do is be fired by Nettleton to have Johns hire you back at a raise, they're that sour on one another, Kromie."

Sally uncrossed her shapely ankles vigorously and fled for her typewriter at this juncture, for the office door opened and in strolled T. Boggs Johns, Esquire, sole inventor of the fashionable purple shade of the Eureka pill. He was a large, young man with disarmingly innocent round eyes, a cameo profile and teeth that seemed just intended to flash in a merry smile. His well cut checked suit bore the hallmark "successful bachelor" in every attention-compelling detail.

PLEASANT WORDS.

"Nettleton not in yet, I'll bet," he sneered, and rushed into his office.

When George Nettleton arrived, five minutes later, Miss Parker was industriously clicking the keys of her machine.

"Boggs is here before noon, for a change, I see," growled Nettleton, removing his partner's hat from its hook and hanging his own brown derby in the place of the sporty gray "bowler."

Sally apostrophized high heaven. "Ah! how comes the usual morning diversion of gettin' fired a few times because I ain't the Sally twins and so able to come trippin' into the office at one and the same time when the buzzers sound simultaneous to announce with their pretty chimes: 'I wonder if George does it' the same way about running his marriage partnership with Mrs. N as he indulges in when he has a bit of a chat with Krome. An outsider might have said that she wanted to indulge in a little feast of gossip. Sally high-mindedly told her self that something had to be done to save the business, and that she and Krome were the very people to devise "ways and means." She left her desk and came over to the big centre table.

There she arranged herself in a deep leather chair, and, crossing her knees luxuriously, she pulled out a handkerchief, and with that and the palm of her hand as buffer, she improved the moment by brightening the already incandescent lustre of her pink nails.

At this moment Sally's philosophy had carelessly wasted on the office boy a few moments ago. But then, it pays a stenographer to keep in practice. Her life is so full of possible young men!

"When did you get in? Did you have a good trip? How long are you going to stay? How'd you manage the conflicting orders you got every day from the two loving partners"——

"Say, little bright eyes—lemme get my breath, and I'll tell you about it between the courses of dinner and hesitating tonight. Are you on?"

"If that ain't like a man, Tony Toler—breathin' in at 11:10 and thinkin' that a poor girl has nothin' to do but sit waitin' for his train to come puffin' in from beyond the Great Divide so he can ask her for dinner without even a day's notice—though goodness knows you might have sent me at least one postal of a Milwaukee beer garden. What time'll I meet you, Tony?"

"I'll be round at 7 with a taxi—in style—and for the reason, watch this, little Goldilocks."

And Tony marched over to the opposite and opposing doors of the partners in Nettleton & Johns and rapped smartly on each frosted glass door.

BOTH HANDS OUT.

The doors opened and the frost extended itself to the manner of each partner as they entered and, agreeing for once in a way, looked with astounded and outraged dignity at Tony. That young man smiled and nodded, and as they strode forward angrily he held out both hands to stop them.

"Good morning, boys! Here I am, and you are going to love little Tony pretty soon. In fact, I think you are going to slip me a little kiss. But that is not what I want. I've almost—I say ALMOST—landed the Northwestern Drug Company!"

"What!" shouted Nettleton.

And "What!" shouted Johns.

"Good boy," cried Nettleton, shaking the "good boy" by the hand.

Johns glared at his partner as he made up for his lapse in cordiality by slapping Tony on the back.

"When will you bring him here?" asked Jones.

"Well, it's not in my contract, but both of you promised that the day I brought the scalp-lock of the Northwestern you'd make me a partner in this firm—now then, does it go?"

Miss Parker murmured something to herself anent taxis and another partner to join in the scrapping, but her voice was mercifully muffled behind the sheet of paper in her typewriter. Nettleton hesitated. Johns, seeing this, followed out the impolitic policy of the firm and acceded to Tony's demand.

"When I make a promise, Tony, I keep it."

That Treasure Simplicity

It Is Worth More Than Jewels and Gold

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

GETTING "all dolled up" seems to be some folks' idea of being charming. And ruffles and frills and furbelows aren't charming at all—they are merely distracting.

Anything that is worth anything is worth standing by and for itself. There is a great deal of truth in the old saying, "Beauty unadorned—adorned the most."

Recently a girl I have long known and never thought at all pretty began to seem almost beautiful. I hunted for the reason. She was no dearer to me than ever. She was not dressing any better than usual. There seemed no general reason for her improvement in appearance. And the particular cause at last made itself felt. Her hair, which she had been in the habit of waving and puffing into a "broken halo" about her head, was now brushed smoothly into shining coils.

In the unadorned simplicity of her coiffure it became evident that she had a remarkably well shaped head, a smooth white brow and masses of glossy, fine hair. Her whole face took on the charm of simplicity. It had a cool, clean, restful look that actually made me think her beautiful, and since everyone else I knew was exclaiming, "My, how pretty Jessie's getting," I decided that the best argument for simplicity I had ever seen was embodied in Jessie of the smooth locks.

Gowns of simple lines, simple color schemes, whole costume combinations that look unelaborate, unstudied and simple, charm the beholder. Of course they are probably worked out with a great deal of elaboration. But the effect they produce is one of simplicity. It is worth striving for.

The principle that makes a costume charming applies equally well to a personality. Mannerisms, peculiarities and affectations are not at all attractive. They give a personality, a touch of unreality and of artificiality that is not at all lovable. This does not mean that one is not to have depth. Simplicity and shallowness are not in any way synonymous. Simplicity really proceeds most easily and most naturally from a big, deep nature that is not bothering to produce impressions.

The people who strike conscious poses are too busy producing effects to produce much work in the world. The people who are doing constructive work are thinking more or less in the doing to waste any energy on worrying about how they strike the rest of the world. Consequently they give a very simple impression to humanity. They just live and their own personalities and are what they are.

There is a very lovable quality to simplicity. No one can wilfully compliment can be paid a man than to say he has the simple heart of a man and the simple heart of a child. No greater compliment can be given a woman than to say that she has all the big abilities of mature womanhood and the simple sweetness of an unaffected child.

Simplicity is lovable and livable.

Too Hasty

Landlady (indignantly)—There isn't such a thing in the house! You must have brought it with you!

Lodger (coolly)—I was going to say, madam, that I found a fly-paper on the wall in my bedroom last night, and I won't dispute your word as to my having brought it with me, so I'll keep it.

Advice to the Lovelorn

THE BRIDE'S DOWRY

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX.

I am a young girl, engaged, and expect to be married in about six months.

Will you kindly tell me what is expected of a girl in setting up a household. In Europe a girl furnishes the whole house and has her dowry besides. Is this the custom here?

The family of my fiance are a great deal better situated, financially, than my own, my father being only a working man.

I have no dowry and will have only my personal trousseau and the household linens. Do I require anything else?

This matter has never been discussed between my fiance and myself. ALMA V.

You want to follow the custom, I am sure. And inasmuch as you have your personal wardrobe and linens you have complied with the "custom of the country." Don't worry about a dowry—what your fiance wants is your love—not money, which it would strain your father to give.

YOUR FATHER WILL CARE FOR HER

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have known a young man for the past year who lives in another town. He has repeatedly asked me to marry him, but I have already refused, as I cannot bear to leave my mother.

My mother is in poor health, and, as I am an only child, if I go away there will be no one to take care of her. I would take her with me, but my father does not want to go, and she will not leave him alone.

I love my mother, I love my sweetheart, and I am torn between the two of them. I do not know what to do. BIRDIE.

YOUR attitude toward your mother is greatly to be commended, but I am sure that she will not want you to sacrifice your life for her. Stop your father is living and can care for her, I think you are quite free to marry the man you love. If anything serious befell, your husband would surely let you go home temporarily or bring your mother to your home.

TOO MUCH RACIAL DIFFERENCE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX.

A young American girl through the course of business transactions, meets a young Chinese and fall in love with him. This man was born in this country, has a very good education and now holds a responsible position with the government. He is very much attached to this girl and is always most courteous and respectful.

Do you advise them to get married, regardless of what her friends may think and say? The girl likes him very much, but is afraid of what the world will say. Also what part of the country do you think best for them to live?

EMMA.

THE white and Mongolian races should not intermarry. Their customs and beliefs are fundamentally different. The prejudice of the world and "what people say" is based on this fact. No permanent happiness can come from the union of people whose ancestry and training lie worlds apart.

COURAGE IS COMMON IN THIS WAR.

London, Feb. 4.—Every Englishman knows how to die bravely. The Irish, Scotch and English soldiers face the bayonets, the machine guns as though out on dress parade. It is the men who sicken and die in the trenches or at home after an arduous campaign that our sympathy goes out to most. There are thousands of such men behind the battle lines who went to the front without the strong constitution and good pure blood to withstand the deprivations, the hardships of the campaign in Belgium and France. It's a warning that we should pay strict attention to our stomach, liver and blood. If one is all out of sorts he should take an invigorating tonic and alterative such as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which cures diseases of the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition. It eliminates from the blood disease breeding poisons. It makes the blood rich and pure, and furnishes a foundation for sound, physical health. Fifty years ago, Dr. Pierce of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, at Buffalo, N. Y., found that certain herbs and roots manufactured by using glycerine without the use of alcohol or opiates, made into a concentrated extract, which he called Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, made a stimulating tonic for the stomach, helped the digestion and assimilation of the food and eradicated poisons from the blood. This is nature's cure for indigestion and by correcting the stomach, and thereby feeding the blood on pure materials, the red blood corpuscles are increased and the body established in a healthy state. No one suffers from catarrh who has plenty of red blood corpuscles and a good digestion. Catarrh in all its forms is a stagnation of the blood. Introduce pure red blood into the system by taking the "Medical Discovery" and health is assured.—Advertisement.

GERMANS HISS BRYAN'S NAME

The mention of Secretary Bryan's name, during the big "neutrality" meeting, held in Symphony Hall under the auspices of the German National Alliance, brought forth a storm of hisses. A sympathizer of the allies, who disclosed his sentiments by the nature of his questions during the discussion after the speeches, was also hissed, in spite of the efforts of Dr. Edward von Mach, president of the organization, to silence him by standing, accentuating the rhythm by marking time with their feet.

The hissing of Secretary Bryan occurred when Dr. von Mach was reading a telegram from Congressman Vollmer. When the professor read Mr. Bryan to be the first American official to say the United States cannot legally declare an embargo on the export of arms and ammunitions to belligerents," the storm of hisses burst forth.

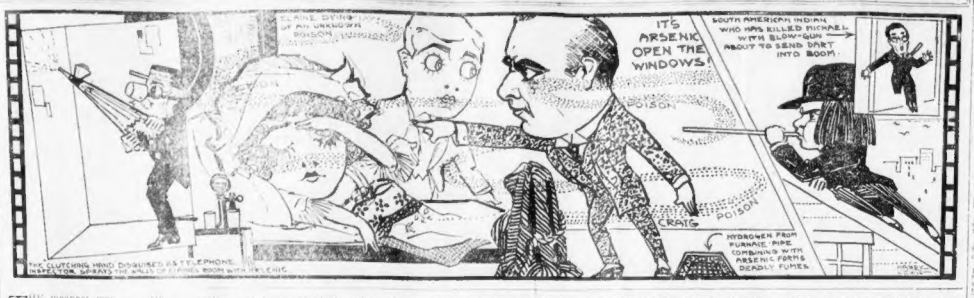
"Poisoned Room" Mystery the Most Thrilling and Gripping Episode in "The Exploits of Elaine"



THE CLUTCHING HAND: DISGUISED AS TELEPHONE, HARKETON, SPRAYS THE WALLS OF LOVELL'S ROOM WITH HCN GAS.

THE meanest man in society at work in the exploits of Elaine." The meanest man on earth is he who resorts to poisoning his foe.

Craig Kennedy, the heinous detective having consented once more to combine forces with Inspector Sinn Leary, of the Clutching Hand killing his father, are confronted with many poses and menaces of punishment of the murderer.

Elaine Dillard was aught the thought of leaving was very far off and the thoughts of love very near. For, after all, she was but a girl, with a girl's heart and a girl's beautiful desire of love and trust. That she awoke ill the next morning, and that the coincidence that slept on the end of her face was also ill, startled her. But latter that came in her dressing-room mail caused her to drop in consternation, closed to physical pain.

"Michael is dead," was scrawled in the note that had no formal beginning. "Come to Craig's studio today. Tomorrow you will be dead. And the police will be arrested, unless you disclosure time."

Hastily the girl seizes the telephone receiver. Sinn Leary, Craig Kennedy of the latter's father, are conferring in the purposes and menaces of punishment of the murderer.

For, after all, she was but a girl, with a girl's heart and a girl's beautiful desire of love and trust. That she awoke ill the next morning, and that the coincidence that slept on the end of her face was also ill, startled her. But latter that came in her dressing-room mail caused her to drop in consternation, closed to physical pain.

"Michael is dead," was scrawled in the note that had no formal beginning. "Come to Craig's studio today. Tomorrow you will be dead. And the police will be arrested, unless you disclosure time."

Hastily the girl seizes the telephone receiver. Sinn Leary, Craig Kennedy of the latter's father, are confronted with many poses

"Any News From the Fourth Company?"

Considerable, the MOST IMPORTANT Being That the Lieutenant-Commander Bradys Have a New Boy—And, by the Way, DID You Know That Three-Fourths of Kitchener's Army Are Married Men? No? Yes, Sir!

Queer little stories came down to us from the Civil War and were told about the Village.

One was about Ellen O'Brien, whose young husband had gone away with the Fourth Regiment.

Ellen was at the postoffice every morning to ask Joe Stevens: "Are they any news from the Fourth Company?"

She meant the Fourth Regiment, of course.

Years and years afterward the village folk greeted one another on the highway, "Any news from the Fourth Company?" This meant, "How do you DO today. How are all the folks? What do you hear from Will, up to the city?"

"Are they any news from the Fourth Company" in Europe?

What do we really KNOW of affairs abroad?

How moves life in England?

What do they find to talk about in Britain, now that "the boys" are off to war?

We get little news by the cable, which continues to report that the Czar has "hurled" 1,000,000 men, and the Emperor has "thrown" 2,000,000 men, and Kitchener WANTS 1,000,000 men at once.

Nothing quite clear in this war news, except that it is all terrible. Few of us know what it is about; many of us believe the war was unnecessary.

Why not pick up a London newspaper of recent date and find out just what is proceeding at home?

HAVING done so, we invite your attention.

Three-fourths of Kitchener's army are married men!

Isn't this surprising? Or IS it?

Some talk that the government may compel SINGLE MEN to enlist; gray-haired patriots urge that Kitchener set a time limit, within which bachelors may enlist to escape the draft.

Nearly 2,000 London policemen are "with the colors," we read. [In England they spell it "colours."]

The Soldiers' Dental Aid Fund, 36 Leicester square, W. C., advertises that funds are urgently needed.

There are numberless cases of men desirous of serving their country who have to be rejected solely on account of their teeth. The dental hospitals are nobly doing their best; but until now no fund has existed to PROVIDE TEETH.

The Soldiers and Sailors' Tobacco Fund may appeal to those who feel no inclination to buy a tooth for T. Atkins. Still, it is difficult to keep a corncob pipe in place without sturdy teeth.

Every column contains its story of bravery and sacrifice.

The fifteenth case of brothers having been killed in action is recorded. Noble sons! Wonderful mothers! HOW can other young sons of Albion remain at home, while married men march off to the front?

The Albert Hall was crowded at a "great patriotic rally," under the auspices of the Business Government League. On a "patriotic platform" sat wounded sailors and soldiers. The purpose of the meeting was to encourage the enlistment of young men. [One wonders whether the exhibition of wounded sailors and soldiers was exactly a happy or a helpful thought.]

There were patriotic songs. Horatio Bottomley made a speech. Mr. Bottomley's speech 'minds us of '98, and the War with Spain.

Horatio Bottomley said this was not the time for criticism, but when the time came many scandals would be inquired into with regard to equipping, paying and camping-out recruits and other things and he would not hesitate to insist upon the trial by court-martial of every man who had taken advantage of the country's trouble to line his filthy pockets with gold at the expense of the soldier.

Strangely enough, England reports a "shortage of labor."

So many men have gone to the army and the navy that dock laborers are earning $20 and $25 a week.

Nevertheless, there is a serious congestion of port traffic, although for five months of the war imports had declined 20 per cent. throughout the kingdom and exports had fallen 41 per cent.

Genuine alarm everywhere at the blockade in the ports, which means that freights and prices must continue to climb skywards.

The King and the Queen will tomorrow afternoon, Tuesday, February 2, make their first visit to the theatre since the outbreak of the war. Distinguished players appear at the Royal Opera House, Covent Garden, in "The School for Scandal," for the benefit of the Actors' Benevolent Fund.

The editor of Burke's Landed Gentry writes to know "what is going to be the offic al name for the present war." The gentleman's question appears to us to be the most typically British thing in this British newspaper. "They are still fighting, but man alive WE shall win, of course; so, then, what shall we CALL the bloomin fuss?"

We IMAGINE the editor of Burke's Landed Gentry to be an old gentleman of seventy-two, who carries a stick, wears spectacles and perhaps has tea and muffins with him in the green bag. He is five feet and five inches tall, weighs 200 pounds and has a deep voice. When aroused, he CAN display a violent temper.

Of ccurse, this is only imaginat.on. The editor may be a spinster and an intellectual suffragette.

Here on the first page we observe the happiest news of all, a chronicle of the arrival of seventeen new British babies.

BRADY—On the 13th Jan., at 7 Terlingham-gardens, Folkestone, the wife of Lieut.-Comdr. G. H. Brady, R. N., H. M. S. Natal, of a son.

Heaven shower its blessings upon Master Brady and his young Mother, protect Daddy on H. M. S. Natal, and bring peace with honor to their distressed country before the young gentleman is able to chase the cat from under the table.

Truly, now, isn't all this QUITE as interesting as the "war news"?

Motherhood, Woman's One Great Passion Through Life

More Truth Than Poetry

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

Lovely Woman

HER cheeks have caught the roses' hue,
The azure of her eyes
Is like the soft and tender blue
Of clear Italian skies.
Her hair is like the raven's wing,
Her voice with music thrills;
'Tis heavenly to hear her sing—
But how she can run bills.

HER step is like the fall of dew,
The rustle of her dress
Is like the winds that wander through
Some fairy wilderness.
The humming bird and butterfly
Their heads in homage bend
To beauty as she passes by—
But, gee! How she can spend.

SO little and so frail she seems
That one might well believe
She was a creature built of dreams
On some enchanted eve.
A Dresden china shepherdess
Could scarce more fragile be,
Yet I have learned, to my distress,
That she could break John D.

Which Proves That "Safety First" Is a Good Thing

The people of the Metropolitan District must be gratified at the news that the Boston Elevated Railway has been given the highest award for the best service in protecting the health and the safety of its passengers and employes. The street railways throughout the country were in competition and the record of the Boston Elevated is a signal honor which we all will appreciate, for it means greater safety to us when we ride, as we nearly all do, on its cars.

During the last year, by its strenuous efforts in co-operation with the public under the leadership of the Chamber of Commerce campaign for "Safety First," the accidents on the Elevated were reduced twenty-five per cent., while the number of passengers carried increased almost ten per cent. This makes a net decrease nearly 35 per cent., or more than one-third.

When the public, including the AMERICAN, criticises the Elevated, as it often feels obliged to do, this record will stand greatly in its favor and will help to improve its batting average.

In this splendid achievement so beneficial to Boston, the Chamber of Commerce must not be forgotten. Part of the good results came from the co-operation of the public in exercising greater care under the stimulus of the great campaign by the Chamber in favor of "Safety First."

The AMERICAN joined the Chamber in this campaign and is gratified to see the remarkable results which it has helped to accomplish. The AMERICAN commends to the other street railways of New England and to her railroads the fine example of the Boston Elevated.

Let the Elevated keep up its good work and let the public remember the remarkable results of the "Safety First" campaign and not abate its vigilance. They will ride in greater safety and will help the Elevated reduce its cost of service, which, with the aid of a vigilant Public Service Commission, will tend to give the public better and cheaper service.

"We Need Mothers in Politics," Says Brilliant Writer

By DOROTHY DIX

THE artist has drawn for you on this page a tender and suggestive picture showing how, from the cradle to the grave, motherhood is the one great passion of women.

We have first the little girl, herself a mere baby, cuddling her doll through sheer instinct of maternity, just as you have watched your own little girl doing with her Christmas dolls—nature preparing her for the little ones that long years hence she is to sing and croon over.

Next is the woman to whom her husband, larger than she is, older than she is, perhaps twice as wise as she is, is still her biggest baby to be petted and fussed over, and spoiled and scolded, always her baby dependent on her, no matter how great and strong he is to the balance of the world.

Last, we have the old woman, who has mothered so many babies that the crooks of her arms form a cradle of themselves, holding to her withered breast her grandchild, her face lit up by that radiance of softness and gentleness that makes the homeliest woman beautiful when she looks at a baby.

Most Wonderful Thing

This great maternal passion is the most wonderful thing in nature. It is not only what gives women the strength and courage to hand on the torch of life from generation to generation without counting the cost to themselves in suffering and death, but it is what gives them the patience and the love to bear with the infirmities and the weaknesses of humanity.

If it were not for this glory of mother love through which a woman sees her own children transfigured babies would die like flies. It is only a mother who can hang with tireless devotion over the cradle of a sickly, fretting infant, grotesquely ugly, with its too big head hanging from a wobbly neck, and see in it something for which it is worth while to sacrifice every comfort and pleasure. Yet such children as these—children that any hireling would let die—have grown up to be the very flower of manhood and womanhood, thanks to the mothers who saved them at their own expense.

It is this passion of motherhood that enables a woman to see beauty in her scrawny and frail baby and literally mother it back into health, that also enables her to be blind to the moral deformities of her child, and to behold virtues in it where others see only vices. It is the knowledge that mother still believes in him, that mother has kept the lamp burning in the window for him, that has lighted the way to reform for many a prodigal. It is motherhood, with its inexhaustible love and its comforting arms that never fail, that has kept the world from despair, and made men believe that there must be a God since He made mothers.

It is the motherhood of women that explains the strange phenomena we so often see in domestic life of a great-souled woman sacrificing herself to a weak and worthless man. It is often contemptuously said that the less worthy of love a man is the more some woman seems to care for him, and that no wives are so devoted and so faithful as those of drunkards.

Becomes a Child

The reason of this is that the weakling man appeals to the eternal mother in the woman. Her love passes from that of the wife to that of the mother. The man ceases to be her husband, her mate, and becomes her child, her helpless, dependent baby, and she could no more turn her back upon him than she could leave her little babe alone to the cruel mercies of the world.

In her own soul she may despise the weakness of the man who cannot resist temptation. She may be filled with contempt for him who is so cowardly he lacks the grit and courage to stand up and fight his own battle of life. She may blush with shame for him who clings to a woman's skirts, but stronger than any of these is the instinct of nature to mother him just because he is weak and clinging and dependent.

And it is a good thing for the strong man as well as the weak man that this is true of women, because the mother in them enables them to forgive to us men many a fault and stumble that the wife would never forgive the husband, and that men never forgive to women.

A Valuable Gift

Those of us who believe in suffrage for women believe that the most valuable gift that women will bring to the service of their country, when they are permitted to serve it, is this passion of motherhood. We believe that we need mothers in politics, and that the whole human race is crying to be mothered. We believe that when women have a vote there will be no more child labor; that the life of a baby will be thought to be as valuable as that of a pig, and that millions will not be spent for the conservation of the lives of animals and nothing for those of children.

Blessed be mother love, the one love that never fails and never wearies; the love that clings the closer to us the more others turn away from us and the more we need it.

The poorest of us, having that, is rich indeed, and the richest, lacking it, is poorer than the pauper babe above whose cradle some woman's face bends lit with the divine fire of motherhood.

MOYER & BRIGGS,
Per ORLANDO C. MOYER,
January 28, 1915. Certified Public Accountant.

Every dollar received for the Basket Fund was expended in the purchase of the baskets, and the entire sum of $13,363.51 was so used.

The Boston AMERICAN, in addition to its money contributions to this fund, bore all the various expenses incident to such a work, and the services of its employes in such departments as could give aid were voluntarily, cheerfully and enthusiastically given to carry the work to a timely, proper and successful conclusion, and to fulfill the purpose of this collection in its highest sense.

THE COQUETTE

By CONSTANCE CLARKE

EYES that tell so very much
Lips that are discreet,
Hands that tremble at my touch,
Who would dream that you were such,
Cruel and yet so sweet?

Yet you throw a rose away,
Smiled to see it die;
And you scorned the ugly gray
Of the grub that might some day
Be a butterfly.

Love's true gift you would not see
With your narrowed sight;
Life you'd shirk and pain you'd flee,
Still men wonder can there be
Women born so light?
